VOTER POLL FINDS DEBATE AIDED FORD AND CUT CARTER LEAD

37% BELIEVE PRESIDENT WON

24% Favor Georgian, Who Loses His Plurality in West, and 35% Call Confrontation a Draw

By R. W. APPLE Jr. In the prevailing view of the American electorate, President Ford won his crucial first debate with Jimmy Carter on Thursday night, a poll by The New York Times and CBS News indicates. Many politicians and most political analysts considered the Presidential faceoff a draw. But those whose opinion matters most, the voters, did not agree. Of the 1,167 respondents in the survey, 37 percent thought the President had the better of things, 24 percent thought Mr. Carter had won, 35 percent called it a draw and 4 percent were unwilling to express any opinion. The debate appeared to have been one factor, though by no means the dominant one, in a general improvement in Mr. Ford's position since the last Times/CBS

poll three weeks ago. Lead Is Cut in Half

According to the new survey, which was conducted by telephone on Friday and Saturday, the President has cut roughly in half his Democratic rival's national lead; has overtaken the Georgian among the strategic independent voters, and has also overhauled Mr. Carter to take a substantial lead in the West.

With five weeks to go until Election Day, the former Georgia Governor clung to his national edge, but the momentum was clearly against him. Further slippage of the kind he has so far experienced would drop him behind the President by Nov. 2, when the voters will make their

Next Diplomatic Move Is Put Up to Britain—London Says It Will Help to Set Up an Interim Regime

LUSAKA, Zambia, Sept. 26-The five "front line" African presidents refused today to accept a plan presented by Prime Minister Ian D. Smith to achieve majority rule in Rhodesia, and called on Britain, as "the colonial authority" over Rhodesia, to convene a conference to work out a substitute plan.

The African presidents did not reject outright the proposals outlined by Mr.

Smith as the British-American plan for Rhodesia, but said in a statement issued after their hastily called conference here that the proposals, "if accepted, would be tantamount to legalizing the colonialist and racist structures of power" in Rhodesia.

The statement appeared to lessen hopes for a quick settlement of the conflict in the breakaway British colony on the basis engineered by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger during his 11-day shuttle trip, which ended four days ago.

With the New York Yankees officially in the American League playoff since Saturday night, yesterday was a day of exultation for those most avid of Yankee baseball fans, Puerto Ricans, who are rapidly becoming to the Bronx what the Dodger fans were to Brooklyn.

"We go all the way," Eduardo Gonzalez, of 1714 Webster Avenue in the Bronx, said as he predicted triumph over the Western Division winners for the first Yankee pennant since 1964. And - with slight hesitation — he even predicted victory over the awesome Cincinnati Reds, last year's champions, for the Yankees' first World Series triumph since

Newlyweds Offered Lures. To Start Lives in West Berlin

WEST BERLIN, Sept. 26 - When Peter and Helene Weber flew in to West Berlin from their Rhineland village a few weeks ago they were welcomed as spe-cial guests of honor by a city official who handed them a bouquet. Mr. Weber, who is a plumber, and his wife, a hairdresser, said they were surprised and

The newlywed Webers had received the invitation to spend three days getting to know this city under a program meant to try to curb West Berlin's population losses. City officials hope that young couples like the Webers will decide to settle here.

Through tax incentives, special honuses for newcomers, Government-supported trips for students and other groups of West German citizens, West Berlin is seeking to attract workers to stabilize its economy. Last year the city lost almost 40,000 people, or about 2 percent.

Decline Critical in Berlin

All major German cities are suffering losses in population but the decline is especially marked in this West German island in East Germany. There is no suburban hinterland here to augment the labor force.

Until 1961, when the Communists raised the Berlin wall, 60,000 to 70,000 East Germans a day commuted into West Berlin to work in the city's industries. Since then more than 300,000 West Germans have moved to West Berlin to work, but less than half of them have stayed on here. "In recent years the flow has decreased, in part because a stagnant economy has cut the Germans' mobility in general, in part because many West Germans no longer seem to consider life in this struggling metropolitan area a worthwhile challenge. Last year, only 10,000 West Germans came. Now the city has begun to apply unusual meth-ods—it invites newlyweds, and it sends labor experts to West German cities Doing Business on a Bus

At Goslar, a medieval town near the Harz Mountains in West Germany, business was brisk the other day. Two double-decker buses, used in the West Berlin campaign, were parked at a streeb corner opposite the railway station, a block from a technical school thing here."

Joachim Butzke, a West Berlin official, told the caller about the West Berlin school situation.

Apart from an 8-percent tax rebate that all West Berlin workers enjoy, newcomers receive a special payment to compensate them for costs of moving, and they are given the fare for three weekend trips home during their first six months in West Berlin. A young sales clerk told one of the labor experts that he might like Berlin

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE

The complete Paris collection only at-

Yugoslav journalists held a rally in this southern Austrian mountain hamlet today to accuse this country of persecuting its Slovene minority.

For miles around, the little community was ringed by policemen alert for trouble between the Slovenes and ethnic-German Austrians, but a holiday atmosphere prevailed. A 50-piece uniformed band played for the rally and young Slovenes hawked T-shirts that said in German and Sloveness. "Carinffinan Sloveness Strangers in

nian: "Carinthian Slovenes: Strangers in Their Own Homeland:"

Globasnitz, four miles from the Yugo-slav border, was selected for the rally because it is in the center of a farming region heavily populated with Slovenes. Boycott of a Census Urged

A series of Slovene speakers addressed a crowd of 1,000 from a stand set up in an apple orchard behind Globasoffiz's country store and inn. The thrust of the speeches was that Slovenes of the Austrian province of Carinthia, next to Yngo-slavia, should boycott a national census, scheduled for November, of Austria's

5 Black African Presidents Refuse To Accept Rhodesia Transition Plan

incursions by guerrille forces into Rhodesia and South-West Africa, and they indicated today that the guerrilla war would

tate left the red-brick state house, somber-looking and refusing any comment; said that the proposals advanced by Prime Minister Smith in a speech to Rhodesians Friday night had been "carefully

No Contact With Nationalist Leaders

The presidents did not meet with either of the two Rhodesian nationalists who appeared on the scene, Joshua Nkomo, the head of a moderate faction of the African National Council, who has close ties to President Kaunda, and a rival. Dishop Abel Muzorewa.

The basic tone of the communique was triumphant. Referring to Mr. Smith's was triumphant. Referring to Mr. smith's reluctant concession to give majority rule within two years, it hailed what it termed "the isolation and collapse of the illegal racist minority regime."

The statement issued by the presidents did not list their objections to the proposals for transition to majority rule in Rhodesia, but their views have become through conversations with Tanknown through conversations with Tan-zanian officials and others over the last

The main objection is to the structure and racial composition of the proposed interim government, as outlined by Mr. Smith, it would be a two-tier system, consting of a council of state and a council

The council of ministers, which would run the government on a day-to-day basis, would be dominated by blacks. But the true power would reside in the council of state, which would appoint the ministers, and this body would be half black and half white under a white chairman. A provision that decisions would require a two-thirds majority for passage would give the whites automatic blocking

4 Tribal Chiefs in Smith's Cabinet

The fact that Prime Minister Smith has recently appointed four conservative tribal chiefs to his Cabinet, asserting that recently appointed four cooservative for negonations proposed last March by tribal chiefs to his Cabinet, asserting that Britain after talks between Mr. Smith and they are trilly representative of the African people although even many whites concede that they are not, raised fears that the council of state would attempt that the council of state would attempt to install blacks of the same political mula envisioned such a conference.

of Rhodesian nationalists as a smokescreen that would install a "puppet" redisloge Mr. Smith, or to somehow work; gime. Moderate nationalists also found around him, have dogged the Kissinger fault with the formula for the interim misssion.

President Nyerere of Tanzania, the chairman of the African presidents group, has repeatedly said both publicly and to Mr. Kissinger that an interim government must be "an African majority" government. The demand was repeated in the five presidents' statement today.

Skepticism Over Smith's Intentions

So skeptical are the African heads of state of Mr. Smith's willingness ever to statements and negotiating record on the issue—that they fear that any transitional government that remains in white hands while a new constitution is being ions of that constitution.

The prospect of selling such an agreement to many of the guerrilla fighters themselves would be virtually nil. The ruerrillas are becoming increasingly influential as the conflict mounts and they believe that the military advantage has swung to their side.

As described by Mr. Smith, the interim government would also reserve two critical and sensitive positions, those of minister of defense and minister of law and order, to whites. The black Africans, whose struggle has made them sensitive to such things, argue that this would place the entire security apparatus in the hands of those who have employed up to now to suppress the nationalists. According to well-informed sources, the African presidents also balked over the question of when the guerrilla fighting would stop. Mr. Smith called for a cessation of hostilities, as well as a lifting of international economic sanctions against Rhodesia, as a condition to his

be under no compulsion to bargain.

President Nyerere has asserted over the last week that the fighting would be called off only when an interim government was in place—and only by that government. He says he has made this position "extramely clear" to Mr. Kissinger. ernment. He says he has made this position "extremely clear" to Mr. Kissinger. when Mr. Kissinger said Mr. Smith had This position is grounded in memories agreed to British-American proposals, the of late 1974, when the presidents curbed proposals being talked about were basi-

the guerfilla activity to ease the way for pegotiations that proved fruitless. Nationalists have maintained that the full set back the armed struggle.

Still another objection is that Mr. Smith, in his speech, called for negotiations involving only the white Rhodesian Government and the Rhodesian national ists: The African presidents maintain that it is up to Britain, old paper the recognized raier of Rhodesia, and not the nized rifler of Rhodesia, and not the rebellious Rhodesian white regime to preside at such a meeting.

Privately, some African officials acknowledge that they are fearful of Mr. Smith's ability to manipulate and prolong negotiations if there is not an outside power on hand, and in particular, of his capacity to play the feuding Rhodesian nationalists off one against another.

No Mention of Kissinger

The three-page statement formulated by the presidents after their four-and-a-haif-hour session made absolutely no mention of Mr. Kissinger's peace inmention of Mr. Kissinger's peace

Nor did it say that Mr. Smith had been driven to accept the principle of majority rule within two years because of pressure from the West Rather, it laid the causes to the imposition of sanctions and, most of all, "the victories achieved by the peo-ple of Zimbabwe." Zimbabwe is the African nationalist name for Rhodesia. .

Despite the tone, however, the commu-nique was a clear call for talks under the auspices of Britain. Britain had sover eignty over Rhodesia, a self-governing colony, until 1965, when the white minori colony, until 1965, when the white minority, now numbering 270,000, declared in dependence unlaterally to fend off a British demand for sharing power with the black majority, now six million strong.

The proposed conference to set up a transitional government and arrange for the conference lead.

a further constitutional confer ing to independence, should be held out side Rhodesia, the presidents' statement said. Representatives of the white minori ty government should not attend, it indi-

Plan Initiated by Callaghan

In broad outline, the counterproposa of the presidents falls within a framework for negotiations proposed last March by tendencies as cabinet ministers.

Mr. Smith's speech—which was a his shuttle trip, President Nyerere, the dramatic capitulation in the context of central figure on the African side, sent white Rhodesia—has been attacked by a proposal for talks excluding Mr. Smith Mozambique and by the militant faction to Prime Minister Callaghan, it has been of Rhodesian nationalists as a smoke reported. Rumors of a "secret plan" to

Today's developments raise numerou questions about Mr. Kissinger's trip. President Nyerers, meeting with Mr. Kissinger at the outset, declared himself pessimistic on reaching on a basis for negotiations on Rhodesia Six days later, efter Mr. Kissinger had conferred with Prime Minister Smith and with Prime Minister John Vorster of South Africa in Pretoria, the South African capital, Mr. Nyerere met with him again and become suddenly optimistic.

rw much of what occurred at his meeting with Mr. Smith did Mr. Kissinger convey in his finel hour-and-a-half ses-sion with President Nyerere? How accurately did the Secretary of State, who portrayed himself as a simple conduit for views of the opposing sides, present President Nyerere's position to Prime Minister Smith and vice versa?

Did Mr. Smith's speech present a detailed plan that had been worked out with Mr. Kissinger, or was it an embellishment of his own? Did the five African presi-dents decide to harden their position after obtaining concessions that had at first seemed satisfactory?

The fact that Mr. Kissinger's efforts were not overtly attacked in the President's statement was seen as a possible indication that the five presidents basically accepted the version of the negotia-tions laid out to them by the Secretary of State.

own acceptance of the plan. If these steps In an interview after his final talks were taken, the presidents feel, he would with Mr. Kissinger, President Nyerere be under no compulsion to bargain.

(D) To establish the basis upon which ce and normalcy can be restored in the territory.

Two Phases Are Envisaged

To achieve these goals two phases are envisaged. The first phase will deal with the establishment of an African majority transitional government. The second phase will be concerned with working out the details of the Zimbabwe independence constitution.

The presidents have carefully studied the proposals as outlined by the illegal and racist regime which, if accepted, would be tantamount to legalizing the colonialist , and racist structures of power. # The Terms, as Stated by

Following, as stated by Prime Min-ister Ian D. Smith, are the proposals put forward by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and accepted by Mr. Smith for Rhodesia's move toward majority government:

1. Rhodesic agrees to majority rule

2. Representatives of the Rhodesian Government will meet immediately at a mutually agreed place with African leaders to organize an interim govern-ment to function until majority rule is implemented.

3. The interim government should consist of a council of state, half of whose members will be black and half white with a white chairman without a special vote. The European and African sides would nominate their representatives. Its function will include:

Legislation—general supervising responsibilities — and supervising the process of drafting the constitution.

The interim government should also have a council of ministers with a majority of Africans and an African first minister. For the period of the interim and of law and order would be white. Decisions of the council of ministers to be taken by two-thirds majority. Its functions should include:

executive responsibility 4. The United Kin enabling legislation for majority rule. Upon er legislation Rhodesia such legiclation as m proposals for a transition to black majora-ty rule, "it was now up to the Western indicated that the issue would be dis-nowers. America and South Africa in par-cussed at the regular Cabinet meeting icular, to sort it out."

Mr. Van der Byl, who had been the hardest-line Cabinet member in opposition to majority rule, bristled with anger as he declared that the five African leaders "have agreed to it and we have agreed to it," referring to the settlement package that was reluctantly accepted Friday by Prime Minister Ian D. Smith.

"But in typical African nationalist fashion they have shown their unreliability and untrustworthiness," he said. "It would be totally unreasonable," he added, "to expect us to change our stand when the proposals were theirs and not ours and we accepted them, as did the rest of these people." Mr. Van der Byl referred here to an assumption not publicly stated by Mr. Smith but heavily implied: that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger had conveyed to him the willingness of the African leaders to endorse the package that they had helped to shape.

Dismay Expressed in Private

Mr. Van der Byl, who had also been Minister of Defense until he was removed from that post by Mr. Smith three weeks ago, said that if the proposals were rejected by the African leaders; the United States and British officials who had constructed the plan should allow Rhodesians to implement it by "choosing the black we want."

than it has aiready taken.

Pat Bashford, the leader of the Liberal Rhodesia Party, which has for some time advocated gradual transfer to majority rule, said he did not think the Lusaka call for a constitutional conference in London should be a major stumbling block to settlement, because the "nationalists are so hopelessly divided." Mr. Van der Byl, who had also been Minister of Defense until he was removed

Fine Kindel pieces crafted with the same care as antique originals.

The Kindel people are never in a hurry when they duplicate the beautiful classic furniture of the past. There are details patiently done by hand, the Old World way. Like hand padding, to give fine woods color and tone. Hand brushing of the glaze. Hand rubbing and hand waxing to achieve rich depth and patina. Hardware, grills and pulls: solid brass, sand casted like the originals. You can see all this beauty and quality now in Altman's Kindel collections.

SICINCI DI UIO FOFAMETICS, orgering down to the Arci

It's unfortunate that although the Mobil Oil Company's corporate body is in this country, its heart and soul are someplace else: In the Middle East. Because the Mobil Oil Company of "America" does not oppose a boycott which is trying to make American business knuckle under to the Arabs' will. But before we get to Mobil's reasons, let's discuss the boycott first.

In an attempt to wage an economic war on Israel, the Arabs first boycotted Israel by refusing to have any dealings with her.

That's the Arabs' business.

But then, the Arabs started telling American companies that if they dealt with Israel, these companies wouldn't be allowed to deal with the Arabs.

That's our business. Not only because the Arabs are trying to disrupt our economy by forcing our companies to meet their demands.

But, and this is far worse, by trying to force certain American companies to stop dealing with other American companies on the Arabs' blacklist.

What this amounts to is pitting Americans against Americans to achieve Arab goals.

And it also means the pitting of American companies against the best interests of the American people.

Mobil Oil Company is one of these companies.

As unbelievable as it may sound it is clear to us that Mobil is in support of the Arabs' attempt to control the American tradition we all know as free enterprise.

Why?
Well, Mobil Oil says it fears that if we oppose the boycott America could be "reduced to a second-rate economic power." (This quote was taken from a Mobil advertisement discussing the Arab boycott in the New York Times, September 16th, '76.)

But that's not really what Mobil fears, nor do we, for we all know that America can never become a second rate economic power, whether the Arabs have anything to do with us or not.

What Mobil really fears is this: that if Mobil stands up with the United States against the boycott, something might happen to Mobil's profits from Arab oil.

Which makes it pretty apparent that profit is more important to Mobil than American principles are.

No American company's bankbook should become more important than its own conscience.

Or its own country.

Introducing a new men's store from another era.

Barney's Oak Room.

At one time, before a gentleman stepped out, he regularly stopped at a very private refuge. There, amid hushed surroundings and luxurious appointments, he was bathed, shaved, barbered and impeccably dressed in the style of the day. The place was his men's store.

As a way of life, it no longer exists. Yet its spirit exists again. In a new men's shop at Barney's called the Oak Room.

This room caters to the man who knows that personal attention never went out of style. To the man who recognizes those clothiers who maintain standards equal to his own. Who understands the elegance conjured up by names like Chester Barrie, Baker, Hickey Freeman, GGG, Lebow and Louis Roth. And the unparalleled Oxxford collection (arriving at the Oak Room in October).

Here, he'll find a rich, oak-paneled ambience that sets off the most exclusive clothing in the world. He'll also find a salesman who is responsive to his every requirement.

Lastly, he'll find that alterations will be accomplished by custom fitting, requiring all seams to be basted, not finished, until the fit is perfect in every detail.

Barney's Oak Room. A lost era, found.

Barney's, 7th Avenue and 17th Street. Open 9 AM to 9:30 PM. Free parking. We honor the American Express Card, Master Charge and Bank Americand. And, of course, your Barney's Card.

Dr. and Mrs. Chiao-jen Wang invite you to the first Chinese Rug Fair from the People's Republic of China.

Under the sponsorship of Chinatuhsu (China National Native Produce & Animal By-Products Import & Export Corporation), the sole carpet exporting agency of The People's Republic of China, Dr. and Mrs. Wang and Mr. Albert Moomjy are pleased and privileged to present the first collection of such scope and magnitude ever seen in the United States.

From Peking, Shanghai, Tientsin, Sinkiang, Tibet, come hand-woven, hand-knotted Florals, Formal Gardens, Savonneries, Embosseds, Dragon Rugs, Panda Rugs and Peacock Rugs, The Carps, The Zodiacs, The Cockatoos.

Designs date back to the Sung & Ming dynasties, yet each is alive with China today, the energy that is often expressed as 100 flowers blooming at the same time!

Chinese wool is the finest in the world. A blend of spring wool (for softness and resilience), fall wool (for incredible strength). A single 9'x 12' must contain the total shearings of 50 sheep from the Tsinghai (Green Tea) Province. Rugs are actually sculptured or carved to give each design a unique 3 dimension effect.

Each rug is acclaimed worldwide as a valued investment. All sizes, colors. Special savings on all rugs throughout The Fair, Example: Some room-size rugs only $850.

From now through October 9, come and sip our jasmine tea, come and savor our delicacies, come and speak to our Chinese experts, come and see our precious Chinese bronzes, artifacts. Above all, come and choose a Chinese rug from our priceless collection.

Soybean Plant Yields Increased 10% in Tests of More Efficient Bacteria

Researchers at Oregon State University have found that by changing the type of bacteria that colonize the roots of soybean plants, it may be possible to increase the plant's yield by as much as 10 percent.

The bacteria in soybean roots act as fertilizer factories by extracting nitrogen from the air and fixing it in compounds that can nourish the plant.

Further research is needed to confirm the preliminary findings. If they are correct, the development would represent one of the few substantial increases in many years in the potential yield of soybeans, one of the world's major food

Canapé Principle in Bidding Modified by Italian Players

By ALAN TRUSCOTT

Many European experts, and a few on this ride of the Atlantic, use the canapé principle in opening the bidding: They bid a short suit, and keep a longer suit in reserve. Carlo Mosca and Silvio Sbarigia, two highly talented young Italians who were members of the team that just failed to win the world Clympiad feam title in Monte Carlo this year, employ a surprising extension of the canape concept.

They use canapé overcalls, and car-ried this strange notion to extremes on the diegramed deal from a European championship. The venture succeeded up to a count, but in the end it was the partner of the canape overcall who

Over one heart, West bid one spade, keeping his long diamond suit in reserve—a permanent reserve as it turned out. North raised hearts, and East jumped in spades, having sufficient support for a suit that might have only three cards.

South Bids Five Hearts

South carried on to four hearts, but West boildly bid his three-card suit for the second time. North doubled, and the partnership was on the road to a 300-point penalty. But South wanted a vulnerable game and continued to five hearts. This should have proved a losing action, since the defense should always make three tricks.

If the defense had led spades and continued the suit, the declarer would have had no chance But after leading the spade ace, West shifted unwisely to the diamond ace, no doubt hoping to find his partner short in that suit. South ruffed happily, and was now somewhat nearer II tricks. But one discard on the diamond king did not seem likely to be helpful—he would still have three black-suit losers unless the club queen fell obligingly under the A-K.

There was a winning road at this point. If South had led to the heart king, discarded a space on the diamond king, ruffed the diamond jack and led a spade, he would have end played East. But this would have depended on finding one opponent with the chib queen and the K-O-I of spades, a most unlikely state of affairs in the light of the bidding.

Dummy's Diamonds Preserved It seemed almost cerain that both defenders held a high spade, and that the player who did not have the club queen would be able to win and lead a club safely. So South cashed the heart queen immediately and ledt a spade, preserving dummy's K-J of diaspade, presc. _____ monds.

East won and tried to work it out.
His pariner had begun with six diamonds, and presumably four spades, since he had bid them twice. This two discards would not help him.

After working this out, East returned a diamond and South claimed his game,

EAST (D) A A 4 2 SOUTH: ♥ AQ9654

announcing that he would discard the club losers from his hand. Another spade lead would, of course, have left

West led the spade ace.

South with a hopeless task.

East had missed an obvious inference. If South had held, as East supposed, five clubs and a doubleton spade, his first move after ruffing the diamond are would have been to cross to dummy and discard his one remain-ing spade on the diamond king. Helaine Walker Is Wed To Hubert K. Marshall

The marriage of Helaine Walker, a lecturer in education at Vassar College. to Hubert K. Marshall, a product manager with the General Foods Corporation in White Plains, took place yesterday afternoon at the Dreamwold Inn in Carmel, N. Y. The Rev. Dr. Peter H. # It Was Despite All

There comes a point near the end of "How it Was," Mary Welsh Hemingway's memoir of her life and times with and without her husband, Ernest, when the author suddenly begins to parody herself. "In the winter months in New York [in 1966] . . I followed orders scrawled or implied in my desk calendar: "Scalper—Man for All Seasons, Evelyn Duys; check to Leg. Def. sons, Everyn Duys; check to Leg. Def. Fund; 5-7 Architectural League; Ellisons, dinner—order car; flowers to Ilka Chase Brown; tickets, Star-Spangled Girl; Brunch, Fran Koltun; check to World Wildlife; 8:30 Rubinstein, Carnegie; Call Jimmy Sheean; fly Miami, Dave, Tina Roberts; reserve La Caravelle; ducks here, Peter Schub..."
And so on:

This is not intended by the author as a parody, of course; only as a taste of what it took to fill up her life five years after her husband had left a huge hole in it by committing suicide. Yet she might just as well be kidding herself, for if you turn those staccato phrases into sentences, you have an approximation of what her autobiography is like—an almost interminable list of names, animals, activities and events: names, animals, activities and events; shapeless in form and impersonal in tone ("Tears poured out of me," she even writes at one point); almost manic in its seeming determination to keep moving, keep drinking, keep eating, keep socializing, keep on keeping on (as they say), and not pause to weigh the relative value of the increments of life not stop to reflect and define it life, not stop to reflect and define. It can be infuriating.

A Dietrich Anecdote

And yet by the time one has read enough to discover this about her book (you cannot really skim it, because a sentence is as likely to turn up an airplane crash in Africa or a Nobel Prize as it is to tell about another fish. caught or pigeon downed), one has grown strangely attached to the text—attached approximately the way we've all gotten stuck on the New York State Lottery despite the formidable odds against winning anything.

You simply never can tell what might turn up beneath the monotonous surface. It might be Marlene Dietrich, with whom Mary and Ernest used to dine now and then in Paris just after World War II: "When we were talking about the sea and fishing, she [Marlene] asked, What is wanting, Papa? Is it-pearls, or some kind of fish? I never could understand it? Wanting, it's a verb, daughter. An Irish waiter would say, "What would ye be wanting." "No. No. I meant that thing I've heard—wade and found wanting. That must be in the sea.' Laughter and explanation of 'weigh.'"

It might be one of the Hemingways' more amusing spats. They fought off and on throughout their 17 years together, and the fights grew uglier as Ernest approached his sad end. But in the early days, when they were still feeling each other out, their battles could bring out the best in both of them. (Once Ernest hit Mary and Mary hit him back and Ernest promptly inhit him back and Ernest promptly insisted on giving Mary lessons in how to hit correctly.)

Mary and Ernest Hemingway in 1959

Or it might be a quiet moment. Incredibly, there were reactful times, especially ones aboard Ernest's beloved fishing boat, Pilar, when the two of them would simply take off from a world that kept pushing in at them. It takes a participant in those moments to remind us that Ernest could still relay and be his spontaneous self amidst lax and be his spontaneous self amidst all the Hemingway cliches that were accreting around him. Curiously enough, simple mention of these moments serves to rescue him from his caricature.

Gave Up Potential Career

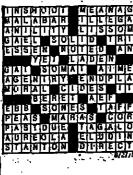

Besides, if you don't exactly grow fond of Mary Hemingway in these pages, you do come to admire her. As she writes in a somewhat silly self-interview at the end, "If events are properly recorded, the reactions should be implied." What the events reported here imply is that she gave up a po-tentially considerable career as a re-porter to make of her life with Hemingway a superior work of creation. Of course, psychobiographers will conclude that she exercised no real choice in the matter, that to judge from her accounts of childhood wilderness trips with her father in northern Minnesota, her life with Ernest must have been an extended acting out of certain primal fantasies.

Still, it clearly took extraordinary forbearance and a gritty willingness to overlook superficial wounds to her ego to stay the course she had designed for herself. By the time that course was no longer bearable and she had made up her mind to abandon it, it was too late; decency if not passion required that she continue. One cannot blane her for filling up her leftover life with trivia. She had much to avoid brooding about.

One other thing that makes "How It Was" uncomfortable to read: The book seems much more interesting when Ergest its alive and present than when seems much more interesting when Ernest is alive and present than when Mary is alone on the scene. Perhaps this is because when all is said and done one is still in thrall to the legend—because the redeeming quality of this book is simply that it is about Ernest Hemingway. Perhaps. But I prefer to believe it is because Mary Hemingway was successful in her chosen can way was successful in her chosen career. She made of her life with the famous writer something that tran-scended her career alone.

Canal Treaty in Peril

It would be an unspeakable tragedy if a new Panama Canal treaty-an imperative for future United States relations with Latin America—should become a casualty of the American Presidential campaign; but errors and excesses in both countries have made this an alarming

Panama's "supreme leader," Gen. Omar Torrijos Herrera, faces the worst crisis of his eight years in power in part because the Canal treaty negotiations-which he had predicted would be successfully concluded late this year or early in 1977-have been in recess since May. The Panamanians accepted the necessity for adjourning the talks until after the major American party conventions, but say they had expected to resume discussions

Ronald Reagan's demagogic accusation during the primary campaign that President Ford was planning to "give away" the Canal and Zone—a charge that aroused all the latent jingoism on the right wing-has made the Administration reluctant to reopen the negotiations until after the November election. But this obvious hiatus on the most combustible of political issues for Panamanians is highly embarrassing for General Torrijos.

It greatly increases the vulnerability of a Government already buffeted from many sides because of an economic recession marked by inflation, rising unemployment and higher taxes. Left-wing students were ostensibly protesting sharp rises in the prices of milk and rice when they launched the demonstrations two weeks ago that brought serious clashes with the National Guard and forced the closing of Panama's National University.

Faced with such defiance from a sector that had given him strong support, General Torrijos fell back on a traditional Latin American whipping boy. His Government charged the United States with responsibility for the student riots and said this was part of a "destabilization plan" for Panama. Officials hinted that Americans in the Canal Zone might be trying to provoke an incident that could give President Ford an excuse for a bellicose intervention that might give an emotional boost to his

The long delay in negotiations because of the Presidential race is regrettable enough. Serious political instability in Panama-partly due to that delay-might be fatal. It is up to President Ford to send Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker back to Panama to resume the treaty talks; and it is up to General Torrijos to cool his own brand of jingoism, as he has done so successfully and responsibly in the past.

Another Warsaw Retreat

The Polish Government announced the other day that it is abandoning all plans to increase basic food prices until at least mid-1978. This is the lat ways most impressive retreat of the Warsaw regime before the anger of Polish workers so violently expressed last June during the short-lived effort to raise food

The magnitude of the retreat is illustrated in the case of meat prices. On June 25 it was announced they were to be increased 69 percent, an order rescinded within hours after the riots had begun. A few weeks ago a "compromise" solution was announced: Meat and poultry prices would increase "only" 35 percent. Now even that step has been abandoned and basic food prices are to remain the same for another two years.

Such a drastic rescission is explicable only in terms of fear that any effort to raise food prices would generate such violent resistance that Poland would be plunged into civil war. That would inevitably mean the direct intervention of the tens of thousands of Soviet troops in Poland, with the end result that Warsaw would be ruled -as Prague is now-by a clique resting only on Soviet bayonets. Even the Roman Catholic Church in Poland -suffering from discrimination and disabilities as it isfears such internal strife and has thrown its weight on the side of stability. It is supporting the Gierek regime as the lesser evil for the moment

It is now almost 30 years since Communist rule was fastened on Poland by the Soviet Army against the will of the majority of the Polish people. An entire generation has come to maturity since then, but the Communists are finding Poland as indigestible now as earlier conquerors found it to be during the 18th and 19th centuries.

The final irony is that probably Moscow is picking up the check for the billions of dollars it must be costing to maintain Poland's present uneconomically low prices, which in no way reflect either the supply-demand situation in Poland or the inflation of the 1970's.

Taxing the Economy

Municipal Assistance Corporation chairman Felix Rohatyn warned the other day that high and steeply rising realty taxes were undermining the rescue of New York City's economy. To avert this threat, he proposed a Federal loan guarantee program that would enable the city to stretch out its massive accumulation of debt and thus to reduce annual debt service charges which must be paid out of property tax revenues. Mayor Beame also is reported to be looking for ways to cut taxes in conjunction with a new economic development program.

Cutting property taxes through a debt stretchout is a desirable goal. The question is whether, in view of its dependence on Federal help, it is a goal attainable in the near future. There is another way, however, in which the city can-and should-move on its own to ease the negative impact of high property levies: reform of an inequitable—and illegal—real estate assessment system that places the heaviest tax burden on income-producing

The Center for Local Tax Research this week threw some fresh light on this problem in a report which shows that the effective rate paid on industrial and commercial properties in the city-that is, the tax as a percentage of the true market value—is more than double the rate levied on residential properties. The reason for this discrepancy is that the city, like most surrounding communities, continues to assess different classes of property at different percentages of market value, even though the law demands that all property be assessed at 100 percent of market value. The report also exposes glaring inequities within classes of property in the different boroughs. For example, the effective tax rate per $100 full value on residential property in Manhattan this year is $4.31. Comparable rates in the other boroughs are: the Bronx $2.81, Queens $2.11. Brooklyn $2.11 and Staten Island $2.20. Effective rates on industrial property range from $6.51 in Manhattan to $2.90 on Staten Island.

While pleading for relief from Washington, New Yorkers cannot afford to neglect their own responsibility to reform a tax structure which penalizes productive properties.

Questions on Vaccine

The United States Government is about to begin an unprecedented campaign of mass immunizations by vaccine against swine influenza, a disease still conspicuous by its absence. Several recent news items strengthen our impression that on flu and other vaccines there is less certainty and knowledge than one would like to have prior to the initiation of a program whose goal is the vaccination of virtually every man, woman and child in this country.

Down in South Carolina the other day, Dr. Albert Sabin made plain his opposition to the immunization campaign when there is no visible epidemic of any sort. He added that the jet-injector guns that will be widely used in an assembly-line procedure may themselves spread disease.

The swine flu vaccines that have been produced for the campaign were originally expected to have antibodies that would trigger off two lines of immunological defense against the disease should it strike a vaccinated individual. However, Science magazine reports that the vaccines that have been produced lack an essential element-for reasons not really understood-and hence can be counted upon to trigger only one of the two lines of defense.

There is disagreement about how much this will limit the vaccine's effectiveness, but the whole story has an ironic footnote: A few months ago there was much publicity about the two million doses of "wrong vaccine" produced by one manufacturer. But now there is some evidence that because that vaccine triggers off both lines of defense, it could conceivably provide more total protection than the "right" vaccine.

In Washington, a group of scientists including or Jonas Salk have testified that most of the handful of cases of polio that have occurred in this country since the early 1960's have probably been the byproduct of the live polio vaccine which is standard here. In Finland and Sweden there have been no cases of polio for more than a decade, but in those countries the killed virus vaccine-developed by Dr. Salk-is used exclusively. Some Washington medical officials seem appalled that their judgment in this matter is being questioned, but we think Senator Edward M. Kennedy performed a significant service in helping bring this suppressed, but important, controversy back to public attention.

State of the Arts

The cultural bubble of the 1960's has never really burst; contrary to rumor and recession, the arts are flourishing in America. It is a curious, perverse flowering, in which creativity and nihilism are often equated, but what both fine and performing arts lack in easy comprehensibility is made up in intellectual ferment, productive energy and very real achievement.

This tendency has been given additional thrust by the Bicentennial, which has produced a galaxy of exhibitions on American art and history, with rare insights into the relationships of past and present, of European roots and American contributions.

It is tragic that just at this time of supremacy the arts are seriously threatened by a shortage of funds and support. State Arts Councils, firmly established in the last decade, are forced to deal with drastic budget cuts. Private and business help for the arts is drying up. Museums, seeing endowments evaporate, seek radical solutions, such as the Museum of Modern Art's entry into real estate, cushioned by an innovative cultural trust. Libraries close their doors, institutions shorten their hours, programs are truncated, opportunities dis-

Those palaces of culture that the 60's built with such profligacy are struggling with awesome deficits at the same time that artistic activities undreamed of ten years ago fill their halls. Museums still expand with striking buildings, while their exhibitions must be underwritten by corporate donations.

But programs continue, with ingenuity substituting for extravagance. More than half of the construction grants given by the National Endowment for the Arts are going for the adaptive use of existing buildings, from New York's Sailor's Snug Harbor to the Old City Hall of Lincoln, Nebraska. Movie theaters become concert halls, railroad stations are turned into community cultural centers, landmarks are given new creative life. In adversity, the arts are pulling a heritage together.

If all this is happening in economic extremis, the arts are clearly one of this country's major strengths and sources of vitality. Recognizing this, New York City has put its cultural and economic assets together in a newly established Department of Cultural Affairs. But the role of the arts needs restudy on every level. At a time of extraordinary achievement, support is more urgent than

How to Combat Nuclear Proliferation

To the Editor:

Bernard Feld's and Victor Weisskopf's self-congratulatory Sept. 14 Op-Ed article about the role of scientists in fighting the accumulation of nuclear weapons shows that they still have their heads in the sand about the causes of the present danger of nuclear proliferation and consequent danger of nuclear war.

The present danger is that certain countries, e.g. South Korea, Taiwan, Israel, South Africa and possibly Pakistan, are now in a situation whereby their best chance of survival is to develop independent nuclear deterrents. This was caused by the collapse of the credibility of unilateral U.S. guarantees and the unwillingness of Western Europe, Japan, Australia and New Zealand to take part in any genuine collective security arrangement involving any of these countries. When the policeman quits everyone must defend himself as best he can.

Of course, an ordinary American can't be sure that any of these countries has a nuclear weapons program. However, were I a citizen of any of them who considered national independence worth preserving, I would feel that my country has as much right as the U.S. to a nuclear deterrent. Moreover, I would consider worthless any promises Kissinger and Ford might make while so many Americans oppose assistance. The other side of Kissinger's policy—threatening withdrawal of the little aid we are giving if they go nuclear-won't work either unless carried to the extreme of helping their enemies conquer them. Denying or in-specting nuclear power plants won't work, because weapons can be made without diverting material from power

Further proliferation will start when one of these countries is seen to survive by demonstrating a deterrent. Every country's officers will then demand their own

The only solution seems to be genuine collective security. Achieving may require the U.S. to threaten Europe and Japan with withdrawal of U.S. protection unless they help pro-

Taiwan, A-Bombs and the I.A.E.A.

To the Editor: Your Sept. 7 editorial "Taiwan's A-Bomb" is inaccurate and misleading. You write, "If the Chinese Nationalists have set out to make atomic bombs in the first known violation of the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty (N.P.T.)-and have succeeded in deceiving the inspection system of the International Atomic Energy Agencya profound reappraisal will be needed for Washington's . . nonproliferation strategy and its nuclear export controls. You then imply that all nuclear facilities and materials in Taiwan have been submitted to LA.E.A. safeguards. In fact, there is no safeguards agreement between Taiwan and LA.E.A. requiring I.A.E.A. safeguards on all nuclear material on that island. The reason is that Taiwan's "expulsion" as you call it, took place before the N.P.T. safeguards agreement could be concluded. Our current safeguards on the island stem from a tripartite (U.S./Taiwan/I.A.E.A.) agreement, covering plant and nuclear material supplied by the United States, and an agreement whereby Taiwan submitted a Canadian-supplied research reactor and its fuel and produced material to I.A.E.A. safeguards.

In the following paragraphs you imply that Taiwan has evaded these safeguards ("the Taiwan flasco," your words) and has set up a clandestine reprocessing facility in which it is supposedly using material which it has diverted from safeguards. I would like to state categorically on behalf of the LA.E.A., that there has been no evasion of LA.E.A. safeguards in Taiwan and that there has been no diversion of nuclear material from any facility where we apply our safeguards.

It is distressing to see a newspaper of The Times's stature drawing such far-reaching conclusions from errors, misinterpretations and conjectures. It is even more disturbing to us, however, that The Times seems to be intent on undermining confidence in I.A.E.A.'s safeguards system. The launching of the world's first endeavor to exercise nuclear controls and to serve the purpose of arms limitation is bound to encounter difficulties. The I.A.E.A. has so far succeeded remarkably well in dealing with these difficulties, but the cause of nonproliferation of nuclear weapons will in no way be helped if international confidence in nuclear safeguards is undermined by those who have every reason to strengthen it. . # Flawed Training Plan

To the Editor:

Last week Assistant Secretary Read of the Labor Department announced proposed new regulations for the Federal Contract Compliance Program which would permit companies to satisfy affirmative-action requirements by training women and minority workers for skilled jobs without being obliged to hire them (news story Sept. 16).

In those areas where there is an acute labor shortage, training programs may indeed lead to increased job opportunities. In most areas, however, the problem is not a shortage of potential women and minority employees, but rather the preference of employers for white, male workers. Since women and minority members were often denied entry-level jobs in the past, it is not surprising that there are relatively few now available for promotion. The solution to the problem lies in an emphasis on hiring rather than merely on training.

Training opportunities will do little to overcome reluctance to hire. In most fields they will increase the number of women and minority workers who cannot find employment commensurate with their training and ability. Unless training programs are linked to hiring requirements, the proposed regulations will result in a regrettable retreat from the goal of equal opportunity for employees of Federal contractors.

Schools: The Ratio Riddle To the Editor:

Amid all the talk of New York City's disastrous cuts to education, the data reveal that there are 1.1 million students in the city's public school system and 47,000 teachers. On average, this comes to 23.4 students per tail a much smaller teaching load. In the absence of precise information, let us assume that there are 10,000 such teachers, each assuming responsibility for only ten students. This now leaves 37,000 teachers and one million students. Average teaching load: 27 students.

We can go a step further, Suppose that another 5,000 teachers have such singular assignments that they take responsibility for no students whatever. This still leaves one million students and 32,000 teachers. Average load: 31.25 students per teacher-a far cry from the 40 or more we've been reading about.

To the Editor:

A recent ad in your paper has prompted me to comment on the practicality of having donation boxes at all public concerts, dramas and shows of all sorts, where patrons would be encouraged to deposit a can or box of food, or clothing, for the needy. If this endeavor could be monitored by a volunteer foundation or worldwide organization such as CARE or UNICEF, what a painless effort this could be in providing people in this country and other countries with necessities of life. A typographical error distorted the meaning of a sentence in the Sept. 25 editorial "Nuclear Second Thoughts." The sentence should have read: "Obviously, neither he [Sir Brian Flowers] nor the [Royal] commission can be charged with the kind of ill-informed prejudice and needless timidity that have been so unfairly imputed to critics here who have been warning against the danger of overreliance on the split atom as a source of power.'

Mr. Ford spoke the language of business, even of business in an earlier day: Government is bad, social health depends on the private sector, inflation is caused by excessive public spending and so on. One could hear the echoes of Calvin Coolidge: "The business of America is business."

Those are real values, and what Mr. Ford said faithfully reflected what he has done in office. When faced with the possibility of a small economic cost to stop enormous environmental and human damage, he unhesitatingly vetoed the bill to regulate stripmining.

Of course it is not good politics to look totally dedicated to the values of business. The President spoke of commitments to other goals, for example the expansion of national parks. But anyone interested in the subject will have known that his Administration has cut funds for the Park Service and not sought authorized money for con-

What comes through as Gerald Ford speaks is a narrowness of sympathy and imagination. Asked how he could justify a pardon for Richard Nixon where there was none for Vietnam war resisters, he said that he needed to "concentrate on the problems of the country" and that Mr. Nixon had been "penalized enough." Nor did he see the human point when Frank Reynolds of ABC News followed up by asking whether the 90,000 young men still abroad had not been penalized

Though he is not gulleful or mean himself, Mr. Ford's insensitivity allows him to be used as the instrument of unpleasant forces: That, too, could be seen. Listening to him in the debate, watching, one could understand how he had let himself be an unquestioning instrument of Richard Nixon. One could understand how he had carried out something so ugly as his crude campaign to drive William O. Douglas off the Supreme Court.

The posture so carefully taken by Mr. Carter in the debate, as the populist friend of the weak and unprotected in society, is not necessarily a winning one in politics. American voters, as George McGovern found out, may identify with the prosperous whatever their own status. Nor is a stronger personality, more committed to leadership, necessarily reassuring. # A Testament

On Tuesday, Orlando Letelier, who was Chilean Foreign Minister in the Government of President Salvador Allende Gossens, was killed in Washington when a bomb exploded in his car. He had been a leader of Chilean political exiles in the United States who opposed the military junta that overthrew President Allende in 1973. He wrote the following article for the Op-Ed page of The New York Times, at his own initiative, a few days before his death.

By Orlando Letelier

WASHINGTON - On Sept. 10 the Chilean dictator Augusto Pinochet issued Decree No. 588, which strips me of my nationality, for "gravely threatening the essential interests of the state." This measure is just one more addition to the shameful history of the violation of human rights committed by the military junta.

In the chronicle of Latin American dictatorships, political rights have frequently been denied to critics and opponents. The Chilean junta, not to be outdone as leader in the field of such violations, has made the entire Chilean population a victim through a decree that ordered the burning of the country's electoral register. In fact, all the citizenship rights of the population have been destroyed.

Today, having exhausted this repressive mechanism they can only resort to the absurdity of pretending that those who oppose their designs are no longer part of the Chilean na-

Needless to say, this decree violates the intent of the Constitution that applied in Chile before the rule of law was destroyed there on Sept. 11, 1973, together with the norms of international law, especially Article 15 of the Declaration of Human Rights of the United Nations. This action has no precedent in our history. Never have governments vested themselves with the authority to confer or take away Chilean nationality at will.

Because of my position as Minister of State and Ambassador [to the United States] of the constitutional Government of Chile, I was incarcerated in the concentration camp on Dawson Island until I was expelled from the country without any formal charges ever being made against me. I was not granted any of the basic rights guaranteed by the Constitution or by the laws of my country.

Among other violations, I was deprived of my passport and thus of my. status as a Chilean abroad. Many of my fellow countrymen were subjected. to the same arbitrary measures.

It would seem, then, that this decree constitutes a complete absurdity. But behind it one sees the logic of a totalitarian mentality, that it projects itself from within a system based on terror and vengeance. Its purpose is to intimidate those who fight from abroad for the restoration of human rights, freedom and democracy in Chile. It tries to erase a whole sector of Chileans from the history of our country, to eliminate the protagonists of a social and political ideal with deep roots in our history, which has survived persecution and is today the emblem of the struggle against tyranny.

What the junta is fighting is not so much the men who three years ago led a democratic Government but rather the ideas we represent. What they are denying is the nationality of values, such as Chilean democracy, that for 150 years constituted an example for Latin America and for the world.

What they are attempting to destroy are the political parties that channeled the aspirations of the Chilean people, its trade-union organizations, and its convivial way of life, based on the free play of ideas and respect for the human being. Accordingly, to Pinochet none of this has any place within the Chilean nationality, and the fascist ideology that Pinochet professes can be seen in this most delirious expression of his fanati-

Depression of the 40's?

By William Safire

WASHINGTON-Was the same "sinister force" that erased 18 minutes of the Nixon tapes at work on the sound system of the Ford-Carter debate?

Was Gene McCarthy, voodoo doll in hand, able to prove that the debate was not "TV coverage of an event" by the mere sticking of a pin?

Was it wise for ABC to give Richard Nixon's long unemployed old makeup man a job in audio engineering?

Was it mere coincidence that the live mikes in Philadelphia went embarrassingly dead on the same day the dead mikes in the House of Representatives went embarrassingly liveor are the Martians telling us to quit tickling their planet?

Whatever the cause, the 27 minutes of the loudest silence in the history of broadcasting offered Jimmy Carter a golden opportunity that will never come again.

General awkwardness was rampant; a worldwide audience was looking for some relief from tension; a red-faced industry was begging for some light touch of forgiveness; all eyes and ears were on Jimmy Carter, whose turn it was when the sound came back on, to come up with that graceful, Kennedyesque remark that would show him to be human and natural.

"I-notice the interruption took place as soon as we mentioned the C.LA., he might have guipped. Or "Lincoln and Douglas never had this problem." No great inspiration was needed, a simple "As I was saying . . ." would have shown he was not frozen to his briefing book, unable to handle the unexpected. But never was heard a spontaneous word, acknowledging the moment; instead, as if nothing had happened, Mr. Carter went into a brief slogan about secrecy like a well-programmed robot, and then recited his standard stump speech at the end.

That was Mr. Carter's worst debate mistake. By failing to step up to the challenge, by being supercautious, he passed up his chance to recoup.

This botched opportunity took place at the end, not in Mr. Carter's nervous beginning, which the legend-manufacturers are making out to be the only time of Carter weakness.

The Carter rescue squad is selling the line that their man's weak beginning was compensated by a strong close (just as Nixon men tried to do in 1960). Pat Caddell, Mr. Carter's chief public relations strategist and surely the most respected pollster in Saudi Arabia, was grabbing the lapels of every reporter in sight to insist his man had not lost-that the Ford victory they had seen with their own eyes could charitably be called a draw. Certainly the Carter uptightness the 1940's."

was exposed early, when he came up with the only outright blooper of the debate, complaining about "the Great Depression of the 1940's."

Now, it is Mr. Carter's privilege to call Democrat Lyndon Johnson "a liar and a cheat" in a Playboy interview, but to characterize Democrat Franklin Roosevelt's economic policies as "the Great Depression of the 1940's"that's hitting below the belt.

Of course, it should be dismissed as a mere verbal slip. But put the shoe on the other foot: Imagine the guffaws and delighted cries of "That dunderhead!" if President Ford, and not Mr. Carter, had taken the Depression out of the 30's and placed it in the 40's.

In the all-important impression of stability and trustworthiness, President Ford won the debate. However, Mr. Carter is drawing even in the press interpretation: "Mixed Reviews," says one headline, "Regarded as

ESSAY

Draw," says another. It's a lucky thing it was televised, or we might never know what really happened.

The gentle interpretation of Mr. Carter's weakness is cushioning the shock to his campaign. My friend and colleague, columnist William Shannon, looked at a Roper poil that showed people judged Ford to be the winner by 39 percent to 31 percent for Carter, and the remaining 30 percent undecided. Undaunted by figures that might depress most Democrats, he worked this around into "61 percent of those polled thought that the debate was a draw or a Carter victory."

Such aggressive defense will go a long way; in politics, a myth is as good as a smile. But Mr. Carter's smile, when asked about this debate, is like that of a polite Frenchman asked for his opinion of American President Ford has shown himself to be rock-solid and steady under the kind of stress that was a bit too much for his opponent. The debate's only plus, from the point of view of the Carter camp, is that it may have taken the public's mind off blunders that had been starting to snowball.

He has had to apologize to George Wallace for calling his fellow Southemer the most unpopular politician in America, and he is busily apologizing to Texas Democrats for having said what he really thinks about Lyndon Johnson as "a liar and a cheat."

And now it's F.D.R.'s turn. Perhaps Mr. Carter is Freudian-slipping us the truth: Had it not been for World War II putting jobless men to work and into uniform, we might indeed have seen "the Great Depression of

be workable. Multinational facilities would legitimize the argument of nonparticipating countries that their national plutonium facilities and stockpiles are peaceful. They would supply participating nonweapons states with large amounts of usable plutonium in the form of fresh fuel. And they would provide oppor-tunities for the clandestine diversion of plutonium, targets for expropriation, and the means of spreading reprocessing technology. We believe the evidence is now in. For two decades the United States has promoted atomic power around the globe. Now our policy must be one of containing and reversing the harm that has been done.

We should seek to establish international control of the plutonium that has been produced in the reactors that are aiready operating. We should commit ourselves to help other nations develop nonfission means of meeting their energy needs. And we should unequivocally reject the idea that plutonium should ever be reprocessed and thereby removed from the protection of the intensely radioactive wastes with which it is mixed in used reactor fuel.... A United States decision authorizing plutonium use would obviously be inconsistent with these policies. We cannot expect other nations to forgo plutonium if we do not:

An argument advanced by the nue accumulated this . clear industry is that regardless of our decision other nations will export nuclear technology. This argument pose is grave but fails for several reasons. First, it implies that the United States should not exercise its moral leadership if there is a chance other countries will not follow us. Second, it implies that other countries will not recognize and seek the benefits inherent in the United States policy. Third, it overlooks the political and economic leverage the United States could use to influence the nonproliferation policies of other countries—for example, trade and economic-assistance policies and measures to enhance regional stability. And finally, it neglects the fact that nuclear power is questioned as vigorously abroad as here. Substantial opposition to nuclear power exists in all countries of Western Europe, in Japan and Australia. If the United States turns its back on plutonium, that action will have a catalytic effect on world opinion.

New Fad: 'Creative' Phone Messages

The New York Times

"Hello, John's been taken in front of the galactic council, and he wants you to leave your name, number and grid coordinates so he can return your call by hydrophone as soon as the quark storm has subsided."

The above concoction, by John Avildsen, the film director, is an example of a new and sometimes creative fad — highly personalized "I've-gotta-be-me" type of messages that squawk from New Yorkers' telephone answering machines,

These messages, rarely longer than a minute and designed to elicit messages from people who call the machines' owners, contain musical fanfares, poetry, screams, laughter, animal noises, sci-fi sound effects, foreign languages, ethnic accents and, occa-sionally, the kind of comments that make the messages X-rated.

"My dear, in previous incornations on different continents, I was orchivist, high priestess, philosopher-queen. Well. you ask, how come I'm now a mere telephone answering machine? I'm being punished for a sin so delicious you'd be sinning just to know about it. To become human again, I must be the best telephone answering machine I can be. Help me by leaving your name, number and a message when I signal with the beep tone."—Joy Elliott, a United Nations correspondent for

One Million in Usa

Many messages are, of course, cut and dried, informing the caller that so-and-so isn't home right now and the caller should please leave a message after hearing the beep.

But with the proliferation of these machines in the last few years—industry sources say there are now more States and that sales are growing at about 35 percent a year—more and more people have come around to mes-sages that are funny or weird or psy-chological explanations of why the per-son felt the need for the machine in the

'Never Put on Hold'

"The machines answer on the first ring," said one owner, "and they never put anybody on hold."
"I'm sick of thinking of something clever to say to amuse you while we wait until the beep goes off. That's all I have to say, I don't understand anything about life anymore. Speak to me!"—David Marlow, a novelist (who changes his messages almost every

Many fanciers of the answering ma-chines say they like the "fun" and "technological challenge" of the de-vices, which range in cost from $150 to $900. The more advanced machines can be operated by remote control from a telephone anywhere in the world.

All the caller has to do is call his home number, place a pocket-sized remote-control transmitter against the telephone mouthpiece, press a little red button on the transmitter, and the machine at home will begin to play back the messages the caller has received in his absence. Some machines can also erase and re-record new messages by remote control.
(In the voice of a Jewish mother):

"The home fire's burning,' she says to me, and she's out the door like a bullet. You have just reached the an-machine of Denny Dillon. Where's Denny, you're probably ask-ing. My God, she must have reached Canal Street by now. I gotta find my way, she says to me. Oy, oy, oy. Have you ever heard such cliches? Meanwhile, if perhaps you would like she should call you later, leave your name and number after the beep tone, darling, and I'm sure Miss Woodstock will get back to you."-Denny Dillon, ac-

Avildsen are among owners of answering machines who have developed taped messages into a fine art.

Owner Has Options

Another advantage of the answering machines is that they allow the owner to hear who is calling as the message given, giving the owner the option answering the call at the moment, returning it later, or never returning it at all.
All this is for the good, according to

Dr. Joyce Brothers, the psychologist.
"Since we're so close to each other in terms of physical space, we need an emotional space," she said. "The machine provides this, because you can stand by the phone and have the ma-chine answer it and you know who is calling; so this is a way of providing privacy. We tune people out with these emtional stability, that's good." (In the form of a playlet, with the machine owner impersonating both a squeaky-voiced young boy and a crotchety old man): "Hi, this is Sidney Davis's grandson. Sidney Davis isn't in right now." [Background sounds of elderly man grabbing away the phone] "Here, give me the phone. Sidney's out gallivantin' with some shiksah. Leave a message so he don't get aggravated. Now wait for the eep."-Sidney Davis, comedy writer. Dr. Abraham Jankowitz, a Manhattan psychiatrist who uses one of the machines in his office, said he thought they were valuable because they "facilitate communication.

"A lot of people these days have a sense of loneliness and alienation, which these machines help break down by making it more possible to give and receive messages," he explained.

On the negative side, many machine owners say that callers frequently hang up because they are either annoyed by such an impersonal answer or are reluctant to talk to a machine. These "hang-ups" result in a long, monoto-nous recorded dial tone on the machine that makes many owners irate.

"Don't be tricky. This machine will recognize your dial tone and get you right back. So you might as well leave a message."-Jacob Brackman, screen-

To try to combat the "hang-ups," some owners use a coddling, psychological approach designed to persuade callers to be polite and leave a message rather than slamming down the receiver.
(In an earnest, soothing tone): "When you hear the beep, please leave your name and number and I'll get back to you as soon as I can. I really will. No, really. No, really I will, just . . . go ahead."—Marvin Hamlisch, the com-

Some Messages Secondary

Sometimes the elaborate beginnings and endings of a recorded message are more interesting than the messages themselves. For example, a former Army paratrooper who lives on Long Island precedes his message with recorned noise from airplane engines, foi-lowed by the paratrooper command: "Stand in the door. Go!" This is fol-lowed by the pops of parachutes open-ing and then a musical fanfara

President Ford won the debate, according to a poll conducted by The New York Times and CBS News. Although many politicians and political analysts thought the meeting with Jimmy Carter was a draw, 37 percent of the 1,167 voters asked by the poll thought the President had won. Mr. Carter was supported by 24 percent and 35 percent considered it to be a draw. The poll also showed that the President had roughly cut in half the lead Mr. Carter held in the previous poll. [1:3.]

American foreign policy was assailed by Senator Mondale as frequently being "indifferent to people seeking greater justice." The Democratic Vice-Presidential candidate said that the United States could no longer impose its viewpoint on the world, but could not escape being one of the world's leaders. He said that the country needed a new policy with greater concern for the "so-called third world." [1:1-2.]

Two separate air crashes killed at least 26 persons in northern Michigan and Virginia. An Air Force KC-135 tanker crashed and exploded in a remote section of Michigan near Lake Huron. Air Force officials said that 15 persons were killed and that 5 others had been taken to a hospital. In Virginia, all 11 persons aboard an executive jet belong-ing to the Johnson & Johnson Corpora-tion died when the plane fell short of a runway. [18:4-5.]

An extensive management system that will generate monthly performance reports from 30 city agencies has recent-been to into effect by Mayor Beams.

The new system also marks a greater intrusion by City Hall into the running of the agencies, an attempt, city offi-cials said, to gain control over the sprawling city government. The new procedures are one of the chief prod-ucts of an advisory panel set up last year by the Mayor to overhaul admin-istrative systems. [1:1-3.]

A day of celebration followed the Yankees' capturing of a spot in the American League playoffs. Leading the cheers were the Puerto Ricans, who are becoming to the Bronx what Dodger fans were to Brooklyn. These fans, who may spend more money on baseball in proportion to their income than any others since the heyday of Brooklyn, were noticeable in the lines that formed in the rain cutside the stadium for playoff tickets, as street corner gatherings in many places predicted victory for their heroes in the playoffs. [1:1-3.]

A rally by police officers outside Gracie Mansion was angrily denounced by residents of the neighborhood as the noisiest and most unruly in their memory. The officers were protesting new work schedules and deferred pay raises The early-morning rally disrupted traf-fic on the Franklin D. Roosevelt Drive and interrupted the sleep of area resi-dents as well as the sleep of patients in a nearby hospital. [64:1.]

King cotton is making a comeback in the South through new marketing techniques and product research. A decade ago cotton was dethroned by polyester. a man-made fiber, but a strong program of promotion has lifted cotton prices to their highest levels on record. All of this is good news for cotton planters who have sharply increased the acreage planted in the crop. [51:1-4.]

Corporations have found a new tool to use in their lobbying efforts against proposals that could adversely affect hem. The new tool is their own employees and the corporations have been making increasing use of it. In an eight-point plan, the judges called for a quick end to a recent police policy of jailing suspects for days in station houses and urged tighter controls over officers who were required to appear in court for arraignment of prisoners. The judges, in a joint statement, said that the arraignment process had become jammed because prisoners "are continually delivered to court late," with "officers disappearing from time to time" instead of being present in court.

Criticism Called Unfair

Replying to the charges, Francis B. Looney, a deputy police commissioner, said, "The criticism is totally unfair." Mr. Looney, who heads the police criminal justice section, maintained that most of the recommendations by the judges had been put into effect, and be attributed the arraignment congestion primarily to a reduction in court hours, especially on

Commissioner Looney, in a telephone ing a police convention, rejected the com-plaint that the police were deliberately making low-level arrests. "We are screening out the petty offenses and making more quality arrests than ever before."
he asserted, "We have to bring prisoners four times to court because the judges can't process the cases fast enough."

Cheerleaders at Danbury High School during a practice session. Students feel that the school is different now and "there's a lot more spirit,"

Danbury High, Once Racially Split, Is 'New School' Today

By LAWRENCE FELLOWS

DANBURY, Conn .-- A year ago Danbury High School was torn by fighting between black and white students. The trouble had stirred for days and finally, on Oct. I, erupted into a huge brawl, with students swinging belts and chains and throwing stones and chairs and whatever else they could pick up

State troopers and the town police from Ridgefield and Bethel had to be called in to help the Danbury police restore order. Eight students and four policemen were injured, and 16 students were suspended from school.

Today, the school is quite different. There are adult monitors in hallways and in the places where students con-gregate. Advocates are on hand to hear the complaints of youths.

No Single Lunch Period

There is no single established lunch period anymore, no split periods that fill the hallways with students every few minutes. Lunch is served all day long and if the students want to eat, they have to schedule a free period for it, or grab a bite in the 12-minute break between the fourth and fifth to get into trouble, and the students seem to like it.

"There's a lot more spirit, definitely," said Laura Cahill, a senfor and a co-captain of the cheerleaders. "Really, it's like a whole new school."

After the big brawl of '75, the open animosity settled back into a kind of surliness, as it had in years past. But this time it was not so widely assumed in town that because the fighting was over, the problem was over,

"It was too big for that," recalled Mayor Charles A. Ducibella, who and stood between the warring factions, trying to get them to settle down.

"Like anything," he said, "it started smell and just grew, and the whole community felt as if to ask, "Why are we having these constant things and why are they concentrated in the schools?"

Black Member Heads Board A month after the brawl the city's 12-man Board of Education elected its only black member, Robert T. Jones, as chairman, and began directing its energies toward changing the school system and attitudes in the town.

Next week, the high school will close early on Oct. 6, so teachers, administra-tive staff member and everyone else who deals with the students, including cafeteria workers and janitors, can assemble with parents and interested peo-ple from the public for the first of seven scheduled workshops. They will learn something of the different cul-tures in Danbury and something of the special problems and sensibilities of people who belong to minority groups.

"We feel that it is a community problem that has spilled over into our schools," Mr. Jones said. "We feel that a solution should be found on a communitywide basis. I think we have, as a community, been reluctant to accept this as a problem."

This had also been one of the findings of a task force from the Connecticut Department of Education, headed by Deputy Commissioner Peter P. Horoschak: that the community had felt no need to keep trying to resolve the problem, for it did not recognize the dispute as a serious racial one. Mayor Ducibella still has his reservations.

Mayor Has Reservations

'A great many people feel we are a racial community. I disagree with them 100 percent, 100 percent, 100 per-cent, 100 percent," he insisted vigor-

Danbury is an old industrial community on the northern edge of Fair-field County. It was once famous for hats, which were made here in enor-mous quantities until men stopped wearing hats. A variety of manufactur-ers have moved into Danbury in recent years and the city is beginning to boom

Of 58,000 people in Danbury, close to 4,000 are black, or about 7 percent. The proportion is about average for Connecticut as a whole, but low for a growing industrial city of the state. The proportion of foreign-born people in Danbury, mainly newcomers to the old Portuguese and Lebanese communities, is close to 9 percent. ties, is close to 9 percent.

Even the large established groups of Italians, Irish and Germans keep fairly strong feelings of community among themselves, but few older people would concede that any of this could give vent to prejudices that could be called racial. The youngsters see it differently.

"The problem was definitely racial," insisted Sylvia Dahlmeyer, a senior at Danbury High School who paused for a moment to explain before revving rvived periodic crack- at midnight Friday, when the drag races that not enough was being done to balt usually occur. "We had trouble, too, when I was a sophomore," she said. "It was racial all right. The tension just happened to build again. There was all whites at the top of the hill and all blacks at the bottom, cussing each other, then throwing rocks." "I have a few friends that are black," one sergeant said.

Under Connecticut law, drag racing is illegal per se if the authorities can prove that the drivers bet on the outcome of the races. However, the dragsters have usually been charged with reckless driving or speeding—when they are caught—linto the rear of the which does not appear to be too often.

Miss Dahlmeyer said. "I had one girlfriend especially. It didn't faze me much what color she was. I didn't even think about it."

Lack of Time Heals Ills

Miss Dahlmeyer suggested that fewer students would think so much about color now, and that there would be fewer fights. There's no time to hang around

William Ryan, the principal, said the new sophomores began school this year a day ahead of the others, to give them day to get acquainted with building so they would feel a bit more secure when everyone else arrived.

Among other changes, any group of 25 students can form an organization, and get representation on the student council, Mr. Ryan said. An Afro-Ameri-can Club is being formed now.

Four blacks are on the 100-member school band; there had been none before. There is a black cheerleader now, another "first."

In the main, Mr. Ryan said, the students are stronger individuals than their bad experience at Danbury High the racial fighting last year the stu-dents elected a black girl as their homecoming queen.

Student Body Defended

"That wasn't any fluke, that's what I'm saying," the principal explained. "We don't have a racist student body, but I think in any group of 2,200 people you are going to have a handful who have those tendencies, and this is what caused the problem here."

The blacks and whites simply have not known each other, Mr. Ryan said. Mr. Jones, the school board chairman,

"We've got our fingers and toes crossed," Mr. Jones said. Robin Trudeau, a senior who is the other co-captain of the cheerleaders, said that she was pleased that the students were being heard.

"The Has felt they had been hurt," she said. "But they listened to us. They did something about it."

MANY VOTERS REMAIN UNCLEAR ON CARTER

Poll Taken After Debate Shows They Are Still Not Sure What the Candidate Stands For

By ROBERT REINHOLD

For all his efforts, Jimmy Carter has still not conveyed to the voters a clear picture of who he is and what he stands

President he would maze, although they generally saw him as a more compassionate man than President Ford and more capable in certain ways.

At the same time his overall lead among these voters shrank, so did his standing on other scores, including the widely discussed problem of Mr. Carter's alleged ambiguity.

For example, three weeks ago, when The Times and CBS polled voters just before the formal opening of the campaign, the majority, by a 55 to 32 percent margin, agreed with the statement, "At least I know what kind of a President Gerald Ford will be, I'm not so sure about Jimmy Carter." sure about Jimmy Carter." After the debate he was described by a good majority, 50 to 34, as more likely to do a better job of "streamlining" the Fed-eral Government, which is one of Mr. Carter's chief campaign themes.

He was, moreover, seen as more caring of ordinary people than Mr. Ford, by a margin of 2 to 1. The voters said they found themselves more "comfortable" and "more at ease" with the Georgian as a person than Mr. Ford. And he was

One of the most striking aspects of the public verdict on the debate was its uni-formity. Mr. Ford was perceived as the winner in every region, including the South; he was perceived as the winner by independents as well as Republicans, by Roman Catholics as well as Protestants. Only among Democrats was Mr. Carter seen as the more successful of the two.

About New York

Dispensing Justice in Wholesale Lots

By FRANCIS X. CLINES

On a recent Monday morning, as the city cleaned out its social catch basins after a routinely gamy weekend, the Brooklyn police ran out of jail space.

There were so many defendants waiting to be arraigned in the borough that the jailer at the Criminal Court on Schermerhorn Street had to keep the overflow from his pens in outlying precinct lockups in neighborhoods all through the borough. Then he resorted to sending some to Queens precincts for safekeeping until the process of testing their presumption of innocence was ready in all its majesty.

At noon, the total was 197 defendants and counting, and the jailer-one of those alternately harassed and capable individuals that all businesses need and shape like indispensible mutants-engaged in cutting corners.

Above the basement lockup, a thin woman obviously concerned about someone somewhere in the building or out in the lockups dropped all pretense about judicial respect and simply sat down on the dirty floor of the main lobby to lunch on a hero sandwich.

Just opposite, the main arraignment court was in operation with Judge Richard A. Brown presiding at or near his customary pace of 2.5 minutes a case—a production rate that leaves him respected in the eyes of court personnel in much the same way as a football by getting a pass off in 3.5 seconds.

Arrayed across the desk blotter be fore him as he looked down on the defendants brought forth one after another were no great legal tomes, but another were no great legat tomes, but 31 different rubber stamps—a judicial tool collection the judge carefully picked over in choosing the correct notations to start the thick paperwork accompanying each defendant.

"Jury Trial Waived" and "Warrant Vacated" read two of the hand stamps the judge window and as the correct the judge window as the correct to the property of the correct to the property of the property of the correct to the property of the prope

the judge wielded even as he asked quick questions of the lawyers who stood before him, often striking bar-gains as the defendants stood nearby mutely. Options—the acceptance of a plea on a reduced charge—would frequently be explained to an accused. with barely time for a frown. A choice was made. The judge would often ex-plicitly remind an accused that he was choosing to surrender certain rights. Agreement, numerous signatures from the judge.

"Go, Mike," the judge says to his attendant. Next case.

The basic purpose of arraignment court is the first step, the formal charg-ing, before the hearings and eventual trial that theoretically lie ahead in the court system.

But the way the harried system works, more than half of all criminal cases are disposed of directly at arraignment—Judge Brown's clearance ther,near ( close to 90 percent of the defendants being indigent and relying on Legal Aid they first encounter only a short while before appearing before the judge. So, this is where justice is settled for the majority, quick as a fast food transaction without any golden arches or a "have-a-nice-day" from the judge. Indeed the court is brought to order not with any fancy cry of "Oyez, oyez," but with an attendant slapping the side of the bench as if it were the flank of a dray horse.

Judge Brown has been on the bench
three years, and his administrative and legal talent already has seen him appointed supervising judge of the Brooklyn Criminal Court and its 16 judges. As a politically wise former legislative coursel and Albany lobbyist for the Lindsay administration, he helped draft some of the laws that occasionally emerge like pale ghosts in his courtroom. And as he talks, the Legislature, for all its Faustian deals and flea market integrity, seems like an ivory tower as he contrasts the criminal justice he heard debated as a legislative worker with the criminal justice he experiences as a iudee.

"No one can say in'advance of sitting on the bench what their view of justice is going to be," he said, still impressed by the experience of it. "You have to sit there, spend time there."

What he sees from that vantage point is that, politically stated, "the courts have no constituency." As he summarizes the problem, the police, who have a powerful constituency by way of the public's fear of street crime, use it to garner 80 cents of every criminal justice dollar. "The other 20 cents goes to all the rest of the process—the courts, lawyers for the indigent, and jail time at a cost of $46 a day per defendant."

He smiles, "So when we in the 20cent part of the system finds ways to move 100 cases along faster, the 80cent part of the system has 200 more cases ready to put into the funnel."
He would like to see the pending changes in the City Charter for the role of criminal justice coordinator be used to reallocate the parts of that dollar, but he agrees that politically this would risk great controversy.

In the meantime, some of the com-promises resulting in Brooklyn from the case volume and budget pressures are interesting. There is a "40-stick misdemeanor rule," an unofficial guide that says two combatants hauled before the bench need not face felony charges unless the combined damage to one another exceeds 40 stitches. And most car thefis are treated now asmisdemeanors, not felonies, so whatever the public's impression of the gravity of this crime, the car thieves' view may be far less grave. .

By such compromises, the District Attorney's office says it is able to focus more clearly on the more serious felony cases, with fewer than 5,000 indict ments this year compared with the 12,000 of past years. Compromise, as much as justice, is the rule at arraignment court these days.

Cannot Be Neutral,' On Abortion Issue, Cardinal Proclaims

By GEORGE DUGAN

Terence Cardinal Cooke told worshipers at St. Patrick's Cathedral yesterday that the Roman Catholic Church neither endorsed political candidates nor favored one political party over another but that it "cannot be neutral" on the abortion

"We hope that the elected representatives of both parties will face up to this situation in the next Congress," he said.

The Cardinal made his statement in a rare, formal appearance in the cathedral oulpit following the church's annual Red Mass for lawyers and judges. The service derives its name from the red robes worn by judges and doctors of law during the Middle Ages. Cardinal Cooke is chairman of the American Bishops' Committee for Pro-Life Affairs, which favors enactment of a constitutional amendment restricting

Buckley Presses for Amendment

The Cardinal's statement provided an opening for Senator James L. Buckley, the Conservative-Republican candidate for re-election in New York State, where the Catholic vote is thought to be crucial and abortion has arisen as a campaign ssue of sorts.

"The process of constitutional amendment is the only fair way to settle the abortion issue," Mr. Buckley said in a statement issued by his campaign head-

He added: "Such legal protection of human life at every stage of its exist-ence is imperative to guarantee that 'this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that everyone, including unborn children, will enjoy full protection of their unalienable rights."

Parents Fought To Be With Children in Hospital—And W

:-- Last November, Laurie Adams found herself at loggerheads with the pediauns department of the New York Hospital-Comell Medical Center when her then 3-year-old daughter, Alexa, was taken there with pneumonia.

Mrs. Adams, who has a master's degree in developmental psychology, insisted on accompanying her daughter to the treatment room, where all examinations and procedures are conducted, to allay the child's anxieties. She also asked that her father, a psychiatrist and neurologist, or her mother, a registered nurse be permitted-to go into the X-ray room because she was then four months' pregnant.

"No matter what, the residents or interns kept saying, It's against hospital policy. Mothers faint," Mrs. Adams recalled the other day. "When I suggested that my father go, they still refused. I said, 'You can't possibly believe that a psychiatrist-neurologist

The potential for such bitter confrontations at the hospital was sharply reduced with the formulation last week of a pediatric department policy that reads in part:

"If they wish, parents may be pres ent when tests, examinations and procedures are performed, except when there are medical or psychological con-traindications, which will be fully explained to them at the time. For example, a parent may be present for blood drawing or the placement of inemergencies or sterile procedures. A parent may accompany a child to X-ray, but not remain in the room."

As soon as it is approved by the department and its patient care com-mittee, which is expected, the policy, which was drawn up by the three-month old parents' participation committee, will be distributed at all pediatric department admissions.

Mrs. Mazzola said she also considered it unjust that parents on the private wing had overnight bedside ac-commodations available while those in the pavilion or ward area were asked to sleep in the solarium. The matter of parental stays did not become part of the new policy, because the hospital already offers it, according to space availability.

Five months later, she had a five-panel screen, each panel 561/2 inches high and 221/2 wide.-the Adlers of today in the trappings of yesterday. Mrs. Adler's sister's family—the Frank Del Vecchios of Belmont, Mass—turned up with their two children on another screen in what Mrs. Adler calls mythic dress, all draped, all barefoot and with some vine leaves to adorn

The third screen in Mrs. Adler's ocuvre turns her husband's prother. Stephen, into a Renaissance man. Mr. Adler, who lives in Hollis, Queens, stares out from the center panel of the work. To his right, is his wife, Caroline, smiling above her ruff, and on either side of them are their children, and there is also a cat.

Only the cat looks as though it did not use Titian as a haberdasher and conturier. Having turned her relatives into relics, Mrs. Adler is now looking for new people to subject to the vagaries of time.

Fudge the Calorie Count: Try Heavenly 'Divinity'

For Whom the Chimes Toll $48,000

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

There is a certain nostalgia about candy-making in the home, a pasttime that was popular before the advent of television and calorie-counting,

Following an article with details for fudge-making, we received a generous letter from Barbara Welch of Newport, R.I., offering us two candy recipes. One was for divinity, which, during our childhood, we thought was quite possibly conceived in heaven.

"Your recipe for fudge is about the same as mine," Mrs. Welch wrote. "Sixty years ago, when I first learned to make candy, we never had thermometers, however, so I always undercooked it a bit below the soft ball stage (112 to 115 degrees centigrade). Then, with two teaspoons, I was able to make it into individual honbors. to make it into individual bonbons.

mixture into a shallow pan that can be placed over hot but not boiling water. Keep the water hot but not boiling, and, as the cream clots on the surface, skim it off and place in a bowl, preferably with the bowl imbedded in ice.

Continue until all the cream has clotted and has been placed in the bowl. When finished, stir cream lightly to blend and refrigerate. Use as soon as possible. It will keep well for two or three days.

The best musical on Broadway tonight is not a musical. It is an opera. It is "Porgy and Bess" and it opened at the Uris Theater on it opened at the Uris Theater on Saturday night, and I am almost embarrassed to tell you about it, hecause although I am an opera buff I am not an opera critic. The curtain had not been up for 10 minutes when I had a feeling that Harold C. Schonberg should be sitting in my seat. Then, despite a touch of guilt and a profound sense of inadequary. I relaxed and enof inadequacy, I relaxed and en-joyed myself. And I enjoyed my-self mightily. This production was

I had heard a number of produc-I had heard a number of produc-tions of George Gershwin's all-American dream, his folk-opera "Porgy and Bess." Indeed, I-recall some of the numbers being sung in concert by the original Porgy, Todd Duncan, which was, I think, my introduction to the score. Then I remember the great revival of "Porgy and Bess" in the early 50's with Leontyne Price, William Warfield and Cab Calloway. It was a knockout. It was also a musical. Quite definitely a musical.

In most previous productions of "Porgy and Bess," certainly all I have seen in English, although I recall one in Hamburg to the contrary, Geishwin's wishes for re-citative have been disregarded. The opera has been given with spoken dialogue, as if it were a Broadway musical or, at best, an opera comique. But Gershwin wanted a grand opera in a folk style, and this is what his present producer,

Donnie Ray Albert and Clamma Dale in "Porgy and Bess." It could have been Verdi

Sherwin M. Goldman envisaged. After putting his idea of an authentic "Porgy" around in a number of places, he finally hit upon the always innovative Houston Grand Opera. It accepted his concept, and this is the very remarkable result.

I had never taken "Porgy and Bess" all that seriously as an op-era. I loved some of the musicyou would have to be stone-tonedeaf not to-but the musical pre-tensions of Gershwin have always disturbed me. But seeing the opera in this finally authentic version— although who can tell how much of the orchestration is really Gershwin's — it struck me as a masterpiece. It reminded me strongly, in every way, of the op-eras, of Janacek, The dramatic material is oddly similar, but, more important, the orchestral and vocal texture seems remarkably the same. Both Gershwin and Janacek are here using their own folk ma-terial, and making extraordinarily similar sounds. Before this landmark production one would never have guessed this. Mr. Goldman, a neophyte producer, makes things happen. We saw this when he was president of the American Ballet Theater Foundation, and in the space of five years or so completely turned the company around in its traces.

That said, let it be acclaimed that the Houston Grand Opera, under its director, David Gockley, has clearly given him every scrap of support he could wish for. The casting has been impeccable, and the entire production has an air — can I be elitest? — of class, that is regrettably rare on Broad-

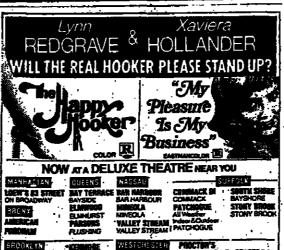

The staging is by Jack O'Brien and it moves the inhabitants of Catfish Row very easily and fluently. The original story is fundamentally that of a cripple madly in love with a whore, but first the opera, and then the present staging makes much more sense of this. The décor by Robert Randolph, the costumes by Nancy Potts and the lighting by Gil Hemsley, are uniformly sympathetic in the most delicately unobstrusive fashion. This helps a lot, as did the conducting of John

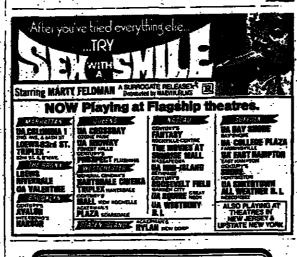

What is so beautiful about "Porgy and Bess" is really its original concept score. It can be taken very seriously as by far the best of all North American operas, and as one of the very few en-durable operas written in the English language, ever. Ever.

Yet obviously the company is first rate These are operatic roles and are not to be sung every night, as if they were friendly vocal exercises. In this spirit there are, for example, three Porgys and three Besses. I haven't seen any of them — except the first cast — yet I would be prepared to recommend them, at least gently.

The cast I saw had Donnie Ray Albert as Porgy, Clamma Dale as Bess, Wilma Shakesnider as Se-rena, Andrew Smith as Crown and rena, Andrew Smith as Crown and Larry Marshall as Sportin' Life. There will be other alternative castings, which we should hope to review, but the present cast proved a pure delight. Their voices floated up in the style of Verdi, yet their acting was pure Negro Ensemble Company. Probably this, and a musical revaluation of what Gershwin really meant, is what the opera needed. For yes, it is an opera. But if any of you have ever worried about going to an opera, think of it as a musical. Either way, "Porgy and Bess" is one of the best shows in town. Just listen to the music while it's Just listen to the music while it's hot. What other white man has captured blues and spirituals in this way? The answer is redun-

UNESCO and the city, for example, paid for the construction of the huge stage and the electricity— about $40,000. But the rock group, apart from contributing the talent, paid for transporting its heavy equipment which arrived in trailer trucks sailed down the canals on

"They told us that our concert would help keep the city going," said Mr. McCartney afterward. "So, we said fine, take the profits from the show and lift a building up. I hope it didn't cost us too much. But if you can't trust UNESCO, who can you trust?"

The 34-year-old musician, incidentally, added that the Beatles were definitely a "past thing" and that efforts to revive the group, even for one performance, appeared doomed. "We have just been separated too long," he said. "We are still all friendly — there is no approximation." is no animosity."

All Hotels Were Filled

The performance last night, which included songs from all the recent alburns of Wings plus a solo by Mr. McCartney of the Beatles song "Yesterdays" was the high point of a week-long effort by UNESCO to focus attention on the con-tinuing needs of Venice. Earlier in the week, there were performances in less dramatic surroundings by La Chunga, the Spanish dancer, Ravi Shankar on the sitar, and other musicians. Not a vacant hotel room was to be found in Venice all weekend. And Peter Ustinov, who presided over a UNESCO gala tonight, watched the chaos in the hotel housing Wings last night and said it resembled the Stock Exchange on the day of collapse.

"We wanted to alert public opinion to the problems of Venice, said a spokesman for UNESCO. "We all want solutions urgently. And we thought Wings could raise at least asymbolic sum that would go to restoring something." The money from the concert will be turned over to city author-ities, who will decide how to spend it after talks with UNESCO offi-cials. The organization's consultative committee met here this week and decided that it was not satis-fied with the pace of the work.

By all accounts, work is lagging. There has been some progress the land has apparently stopped sinking — but UNESCO, which is coordinating many of the programs, is now trying to instill new life into the salvage efforts.

Obviously, the violinists of Ven-ice need no help. The square was cleared overnight and they were back with the sentiment this after-

The encounters of this naïve, sensitive but purposeful man with the so-

There is a marvelous first encounter

The ending of "The Sunday Woman," which opened yesterday at the Fine Arts Theater, is a surprise, but it is a distant surprise and irrelevant. A mys-

Present in "Keetje Tippel" are the ingredients for powerful social commentary, but the collaboration of the director, Paul Verhoeven, and the cinematographer, Jan de Bont, has produced a movie that is romantic about-adversity. From time to time, as though having pangs about the lavish patina they have imposed on such crushing poverty, the movie-makers inject a hurst of revolutionary song, an artist who paints revolutionary pictures, though romantic ones; and a confrontation between workers and the police.

As Keetje, Monique van de Ven has a field day, making the most of a role that enables her to undergo a trans-formation from hoyden to lady, playing by turns the coarse peasant, the innocent shop girl and the reluctant prostitute before blossoming into a radiant woman despite everybody and everything that might have destroyed

Miss Somach showed that she has the equipment and the sensitivity to make such a leap but to reach the next plateau she will have to aim her work at an audience that is not satisfied with absolutely respectable, musically safe playing. The program wound up lamely, with one of the sonatas that Paganini originally wrote for violin and guitar in an unidentified transcription for plane accompaniment. Miss Somach evidently chose it because it includes some lefthand pizzicato passages, which she handled a bit clumsify, as it turned out.

which Sibelius composed in 1914 on commission from Stoeckel.

Mr. Jalas deserves his Sibelius repu-tation: his interpretations were at all times fresh, pointed and idiomatic. But yesterday's concert was attractive for other reasons. The program continued after "The Oceanides" with "The Swan of Tuonela," "Luonnotar," a suite from the incidental music to "The Tempest"

and the Symphony No. 5.
And the soloists were first-rate: Ronald Roseman, who played the English born in "The Swan of Tuonela," and Taru Valjakka, a Finnish soprano, in "Luonnotar." Mrs. Valjakka has a big voice full of color, it would be interesting to hear her as Sieglinde.

The Yale Philharmonia is the orchestra of the Yale Schol of Music, and, a little thinness and lack of bite aside, it played to excellent effect. It was nice to hear this music purged of the mindless big-orchestra plushness of a generation ago. And in any case a uni-versity orchestra that has been care-fully rehearsed and that cares about the music is often preferable to an indifferent orchestra of top-flight pro-

Raw, Energetic Sounds In Concert at the Garden

The current edition of the Isley Brothers consists of Ronald, Rudolph and Kelly Isley, who sang gospel music as children and were making hit records as early as 1959, and Ernie and Chris Isley and brother-in-law Chris Jasper, who were raised on hard rock and joined the family band in 19 69. With the addition of a cricumspect but solid drummer, the group makes a raw, energetic sound that is something like a cross between a sanctified church service and a superam-plified rock show. The Isleys were somewhat out of balance at their Saturday evening concert in Madison Square Garden, with Ernie Isley dominating the music on guitar and Ronald Isley dominating the group's singing as lead vocalist. Fortunately, both are absorbing performers.

The former is one of the most exciting guitarists working in rock; his melodic imagination is matched by a dramatic approach to solo building, a searing, dis-tinctive sound and ample technique. The latter ranges from a growling lower register to a plaintive falsetto and some-times blends with the instruments, especially with Mr. Jasper's synthesizer.

As a group, the Isleys have lost none of their power and momentum. At this point, they are perhaps the rawest, most spontaneous group capable of pulling off a show in an arena as large as the Garden—no choreography, pat conversa-tional gambits, or cute arrangements—and it was a joy to see them work there.

The rest of the evening was not as inviting. Wild Cherry, currently enjoying a top 10 single and million-selling album, sounded like a better-than-average white disco band, capable musically but short on personality. Black Smoke, which opened the show, was better but, again, no match for the distinctive style and energy of the Isleys.

STONE WALLS The Fortune Society is an organization of former offenders and others interested in the problems of prisons and correction. The society has been active in providing a forum for the problem, and now it is starting a Criminal Justice Forum, a panel discussion series to be held on the last Monday of each month.

Tonight's opener, at 7:30, will deal with "Sexual Assaults in Prison," a topic that has been cropping up in the news in recent years. David Rothen-berg, Fortune's executive director, will be chairman of a panel composed of three former offenders, one the victim of such a prison assault, another the perpetrator of one while in prison, and a third who was both victim and assailant. The forum will be held at Calvary House, 61 Gramercy Park North, at 21st Street. Admission is free. Information: 677-4600.

The next session on Oct. 25, will discuss "Candidates and Crime," with the participation of candidates for of-fice in November.

NIGHT OFF For six days a week NIGHT OFF For six days a week John Cullum dances as the star of "Shenandoah," the long-running hit at the Alvin Theater, 52d Street, West of Broadway (PL: 7-8646). Now that "Shenandoah" has gone on a Sunday schedule, the Alvin would be idle on Mondays and so would Mr. Cullum, except that he has arranged it so that he theater will be Mr. neither he nor the theater will be. Mr. Cullum and his wife, Emily Frankel, the dancer, will be putting on theirown programs of dance-drama at the Alvin for four Mondays, starting tonight at 8.

The show consists of three one-act pieces and is called "Kings," It is an interpretation of three figures of Greek myth. "Oedipus," adapted by Mr. Culhum and staged and directed by Miss Frankel, is a world premiere at the Alvin, with a 10-member cast and an original music score. "Medea," which Miss Frankel danced in its premiere last summer at Jacob's Pillow, was choreographed by Norman Walker to Alban Berg's music. "Theseus and Hippolyte" was adapted from Mary Re-nault's "Bull from the Sea" and staged and choreographed by Miss Frankel to music of Kabalac and Piart. No live musicians; all electronic and tape. Admission: $5, $6, $7.50, $9.

IRISH NIGHTS So much of what we see that passes as Irish arts is American-made, but the National Folk Theater of Ireland, on its first visit to our country, holds the promise of the real thing. The company is not ancient—formed back in 1968—but it has been playing for Americans and other tourists in its own theater in Tralee and has performed in Europe. The troupe of 27 singers, dancers and musicians, ranging in age from 9 to 68, will stage its musical revue eight times at the Palace Theater, Broadway and 47th Street (PL 7-2626) starting tonight at 6:45 (other evenings through Sat-urday at 8: 2 P.M. matinees Wednesday and Saturday).

Visitors to "Siamsa," which means merrymaking in Gaelic and is the short name for the company, will see harvest and work dances (one has as musical accompaniment only the tapping of a cobbler's hammer), slip jigs, double jigs and solo reels and hompipes that are a far cry from "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" in music school. Admis-sion: $6.50 to $9.50.

Music: A Fascination for Mahler

5th Symphony Makes Splash; Is a Standard-Setting Event

MEW YORK PHILHARMONIC, Erich Leinsdorf, con-ductor; Frederica Von Stade, mezza-soprano. At By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG

The New York Philharmonic started its Mahler month last night in Carnegie Hall, and the audience filled every nook and cranny of the venerable auditorium. Mahler continues to exert his fascination as a contemporary culture hero and hymbol.

New York audiences will be getting an unparalleled dose of Mahler in the nine concerts ending Oct. 25. All of the symphonies, including the unfinished Tenth, will be heard, and some of the songs with orchestra. Missing will be "Das Lied von der Erde" and the "Kindertotewlieder," The feat, even with the omission of those two works, is unique in American orchestral his-

The biggest splash last night was the Fifth Symphony. But the most beantiful music came with the "Lieder eines Fahrenden Gesellen." With Frederica von Stade singing, and with Erich Leinsdorf accompanying her with un-derstanding and finesse, this was a performance of a kind that sets standards. Miss von Stade is no stranger to Mahler. Only a few years ago she sang the last movement of the Mahler's Fourth Symphony in as hauntingly heantiful a way as anybody could re-member. Last night, in the "Lieder eines Fahrenden Gesellen," she was equally impressive. The big warm mezzo-soprano sound was only part of it. Miss von Stade not only has a beautiful voice; in addition she uses it with

style and sensitivity.
This was effortless singing, with lines drawn in instrumental-like security. Behind it was a musical intelligence responsive to the shades of meanings in the texts. It is true that singers who engage the Mahler songs generally are in the upper artistic echelon, bringing to bear on the music a special set of attributes. But even among these Miss von State is rare for the combination of ravishing lyricism with the kind of simplicity that conceals high art.

Mr. Leinsdorf was an equally sensi-tive accompanist, working with a con-trolled freedom that brought out the rhapsodic elements of these lovely songs. And in the Fifth Symphony he had a different kind of message to con-

This Fifth, over an hour long, is a difficult handful for any orchestra and conductor. The constant fortissimo playing can so easily degenerate into bombast and self-pity. Mr. Leinsdorf brought to the score an Austro-German tradition that is in the great line of Bruno Walter and Otto Klemperer. His

this season Mr. Bullins has promised to

Up to now, his cycle plays, even the one entitled "In New England Winter," have dealt with the urban environment.

In contrast, the roots of "Home Boy" are pastoral. It is the story of two young southern black men who plan to emigrate to the North One, Dude, does go north. The other, Jody, waits, delays and "idealizes" the adventure: "I want to see how it is to sit on a corner and drink wine." One might say that Jody's dream is to be a character in one of his author's urban plays.

Like a clock with a snapped spring, the play swings back and forth—from South to North, from the 50's to the 60's to the 50's. We see the two youths with the women they abandon and we hear something about their defeats and wears sunshades and is street-smart; Jody retains his down-home innocence

Jody retains his down-home innocence—they are country "cousins" under the skin, bound to each other and to the land where they were born. Leaving the land robs them of their roots and their sense of community (although the playwright spends too little time investigating the strengths of the country). Finally, Jody, contemplating the circumstantial evidence of their lost lives, asks, "Are we the victims, the survivors or the casualties?"

vivors or the casualties?"

It is a provocative question, one that echoes through most of Mr. Bullins's work. Clearly, so many of his charac-ters are victims, survivors and casualties. But this time the author has sketched his people only in outline. We want to know so much more about Dude and Jody. We also want to know about the people who touch their lives, such as Uncle Clyde, who Mr. Bullins seems to relate to Cliff Dawson, the self-defeating hero of other cycle plays.

conducting is different than it was 10 or so years ago; it has much more relaxation, yet with no letup in technical control.

control.

His tempos were broad and perhaps a bit slower than usual. Part of this was due to his insight into the kind of tempo fluctation represented in the Mahler symphonies. Mahler himself, as conductor as well as composer, was in many respects a true child of Richard Wagner, and his music is full of tempo shifts that have to m emanaged withshifts that have to m emanaged with-out losing the underlying rhythmic

Mr. Leinsdorf was completely successful in these shifts. He was never afraid of the long ritard, and he also managed to get a feeling of rubato into the music. He was particularly responsive to the long, long melodies. One curious result was that sections of the symphony, the first movement in particular, suddenly sounded like the Richard Strauss of "Heldenleben" and "Zarathustra." Scholars and Mah-ler specialists have not in the past made much of Mahler's debt to Strauss, but it is strongly there, and Mr. Leins-dorf made us realize how much Mahler owed to his distinguished predecessor. So the Mahler month is off to a fine start. This was the only concert Mr. Leinsdorf was assigned. James Levine and Pierre Boulez will share the rest. They will have the memory of this brilliant concert to shoot at.

of encounters and conversations, interrupted by music and by narration (including intrusive mention of famous blacks of the era, presumably to set the play in a context). There are 11

songs, with music by Aaron Bell and lyrics by the author. The music, played by a small combo that includes the composer on the piano, is pleasant, but nonessential, and Mr. Bullins's lyrics are not on a level with his dialogue.

The acting by Rodney Hudson as the soft-spoken Jody and Thommie Black-well as the sardonic Dude is convincing (and Pamela Poitier and Dana Manno are effective as the contrast-ing women in their lives) but the staging by Patricia Golden tends to point up rather than to elide the gaps watching "Home Boy," we are remin'ed of other, more potent, plays by Mr. Bullins, particularly the stylistically related "The Fabulous Miss Marie," the fourth in the cycle. Both plays use music and veer from the author's usual naturalism, but "Miss Marie", a jazz symphony, simmers with life. "Home Boy" is a fragmented play with music.

Fight Fans Fly In From All Corners

From the very beginning, Mike Burke knew that the $200 seats wouldn't be a problem. From the very beginning, he knew that the high-rollers would go to the hip for the big bucks. A $200 seat to a fight, especially a fight with Muhammad Ali, is something special. And the high-rollers make it a condition of membership to appear at something special. thing special.

So, it came as no surprise to Burke that 250 Ali fans flew in from California carrying $200 tickets. Or that 40 fight fans flew in from Toronto carrying $200 tickets. Or that 140 sports fans flew in from Houston carrying $200 tickets. Or even that 50 of the jet-set, including Regine herself, flew in from Paris carrying $200 tickets and personal invitations to an orgy of opulence entitled, Regine Goes To

From the very beginning Burke knew that these people would be there. It seems they always are.

Mystique of Event Considered But Burke was thinking about the cheaper seats—at $150, $100, $75, $50 and $25, perhaps: "less expensive" is the proper term—the ones he had at Yankee Stadium. He wanted to selfthose, and he wanted to sell them to as many out-of-area buyers as possible, people who'd fly in for the Muhammad Ali-Ken Norton fight tomorrow night. He knew that Ali had fans all over the world, and he figured they'd come if he could guarantee them a ticket. After all, it was for the heavyweight championship of the world, an event that reputedly carried a mystique, a

own. Burke was always thinking, "air-

In July, when the Swissair people called him, suggesting he make some tickets available to Europeans who might consider coming to New York on holiday, provided they could see the fight, he began thinking, "package," as wells—as in Las Vegas package, or Montreal Olympics package. Group sales. He thought it could be marketed like a vacation. So Burke started writing letters,

Time Problem Stops Some

On the stat as president of Madison Square Garden Center, Burke wrote to 19 airlines, offering cooperation on any package deals they could set up to bring travelers into New York for the Ali-Norton

There was interest from Swissair, American and Eastern. Ultimately, American turned the deal down because its marketing men felt they didn't have enough time to put the package to-ally approached Burke, had received inquiries about such a package from clients in Germany, France, Denmark, Finland and Yugoslavia. They had set up a 10-day holiday in New York for $158 a person, including hotel but ex-cluding air fare. They got Burke to set aside a bloc of 100 tickets, at various prices, to accommodate the Europeans, who would have the option of buying whichever ticket they wanted. But Swissair never sold any packages; the feeling among its people is that the Garden started its promotion too late, and that Norton didn't have a big enough reputation to influence the

Only Eastern, in cooperation with American Express, went with it. "It was a good idea," and Joe Bianco, the American Express executive who packaged the package, "The price was right, and the idea appealed to who always assumed they couldn't afford to come to a fight of this class. We got interest from as far north as Montreal and as far south as San Juan. The fact that it was a $25 ticket made sense; the guy who would pay $200 for a ticket is not the kind of

A Little Ink for Roberto and Flame

While they waited for Muhammad Ali, some of the men at the gym watched a dark-haired fighter stalk an imagi-

The shadow-boxer in the front ring moved intently, circling and feinting and grunting as he threw bare-fisted phantom hooks and uppercuts. On the sides of his white sneakers, inscribed in red, the Spanish words "Manos de Piedra" proclaimed his trademark: Hands of Stone, "Roberto Duran,' one of the men said. "Pound for pound, probably the greatest fighter in the world."

Another ringsider nodded. "Enormously deadly," he said. "A fearsome puncher."
In a few minutes, Ali would come out of the dressing room at Gleason's Gym, where he finished training over the weekend for his heavyweight title defense against Ken Norton tomorrow night at Yankee Stadium, And when Ali appeared. Duran would be forgotten.

would be forgotten. Now, though, under a ceiling pocked by flaking paint, the 25-year-old world lightweight champion from Panama at least was being talked about. How he had won 59 of his 60 fights, 48 of them with knockouts; how he figured to demolish Alvaro Rojas of Costa Rica in his next title defense on Oct. 15 in Florida, and how he winds up with so few headlines compared to the publicity Ali gets.

"It's too bad," said Angelo Dundee, the man who trains Ali. "It's to survives until Ali leaves, maybe somebody'll write about Duran. The guy gets no ink. Ali soaks it all up."

This Flame Causes Shivers

But at least a few people knew Duran was in the gym, which was more than could be said for Eddie (Flame) Gregory. Nobody except his trainer was talking about Gregory, a middleweight whose main bout next Friday at Sunnyside Gardens in Queens was advertised outside right next to the Ali-Norton posters:

"Every time you mention Eddie Gregory," said Chickie Ferrara, his white haired trainer, "they shiver. Never mind getting fights for him, I can't get anybody to train with him. That's how hard he punches."

Ferrara looked around, trying to spot his tiger. He waved his arms. "Eddie? Over here, Eddie." A tall young man in blue-denim slacks, orange T-shirt and tweed golf cap pushed his way through the crowd. The golf cap was set at a rakish angle, and the message on the T-shirt read: "Definitely Bad." Eddie said he just wanted everybody to

"He'll be rated fourth or fifth in the next issue of Ring," said Ferrara. 'His last seven bouts were knockouts. Another year, he be ready for Moozon."

Gregory, a 24-year-old graduate of Madison High School in Brooklyn, earns $176 a week as a buyer trainee for a department store. For Friday's bout at Sunnyside, with tickets scaled from $8 to $6, he expects to get a purse of $3,000 and keep two-thirds of it. Slightly less than the $6 million guarantee for Ali.

"Guys like Duran and me," he said: "we're not into politics and all that, like Ali. We just like to fight. I can hit you with either hand, and take you out."

Ali was on the scene now, dancing around in a white terrycloth robe. Somebody from management whispered something to Duran, and the lightweight champion, looking a little annoyed, climbed down out of the front ring.

While cameramen and photographers followed Ali, Duran skipped rope unnoticed at the rear of the gym. Asked what he thought of Ali, the little man with the hands of stone replied through an interpreter. "For his own weight, he has done something for boxing. But not for my weight division."

Listen to the Champ Duran was on his way to a shower by the time Ali moved out of the ring for a session on the heavy bag. Later in the day, during one of his weekend appearances with Norton on national television, the champion would bring a "Boy-ohboy" response from a surprised and laughing challenger by saying, "I'm scared. Norton's so good I'm gorma dance and run. I take back everything I said about him, because I believe we may have a new champion. I'm in trouble."

But in the gym, by himself, the real strategy was obvious as Ali punctuated comments to Norton with vicious punches that made the heavy bag clank on its chains: "You been runnin' your mouth, Norton"... (WHAMMO!)..."Talkin' all that jive"... (BAM!) ... "You let these white folks make a fool outta you"... (KER-POW!) ... "Didn't I tell you about that?"...(WHUNCK!).

At the front door, in street clothes, Roberto Duran paused to talk with Joe Louis, who stood quietly with a cowboy hat on his head and a cigar in his mouth. A friend's camera clicked, and Duran noticed his thanks to Louis. Then he turned, and left the gym. Hardly anyone saw him go.

The crowd was clustered around Ali, listening to him urge them not to miss the fight because he planned something "strange and unusual" that would surprise them all. "I won't be good," he was saying, "and I won't be bad. I'm going to do something . . . t-e-r-r-i-b-l-e. So please get your tickets. Goodbye." Red Smith ison vacation.

Rams Beat Giants; Jets Defeated, 16-0

to Triumph by 5 Turnovers

By WILLIAM N. WALLACE

MIAMI, Sept. 26-The Jets were better today, even respectable when it came to defense, but not good enough to win as the Miami Dolphins plodded to a 16-0 victory in a dreary game at the Orange Bowl Garo Yepremian kicked three field goals and the Dolphins scored a touchdown with little effort scored a touchdown with little criert following an interception of a pass by Joe Namath that placed the ball on the New York 29-yard line.

"For the second week in a row we didn't score a touchdown," said Lou Holtz, the Jets' coach as he pondered his team's third straight defeat. "We had five turnovers [four lost fumbles plus the interception] and three 15-penalties. There's no way in the world penalties. There's no way in the world you can win that way. It is difficult enough to play Miami without turn-

Slight Defensive Improvement Holtz spoke a lot of truth, the possible exemption being the difficulty of playing Miami this season. For the second Sunday in a row, the Dolphins were less than devastating and that trademark of Coach Don Shula's offenses, the relentless squeezing of the opponent's jugular, was missing.

"We don't know what's wrong," said
Earl Morrall, the 42-year-old spare quarterback and student of the game.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 26—After a promising first quarter in which they took a 10-0 lead, the Giants couldn't do much against the Los Angeles Rams at the Coliseum today and took their third straight defeat of the young football season, 24-10.

James Harris, the Ram quarterback returning to action with a recently healed thumb that had been broken, healed thumb that had been broken, apparently needed the first period to get the feeling of things. His first pass was incomplete, and his second was intercepted, giving the Giants the ball on the Ram 32 and setting up the only New York touchdown.

After that, however, Harris did just fine. He guided a 61-yard march that cut the margin to 10-7 on the second play of the second quarter, completed

As the game wore on, the Rams' de-fense and their running attack both gained strength, as they were expected to do. Los Angeles, making its home debut before 60,638 fans, now has two victories and a tie and remains an overwhelming favorite to finish first in

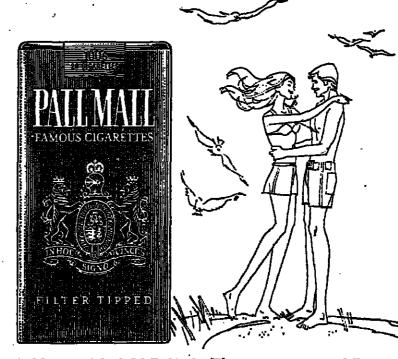

But the Rams suffered a couple of injuries that may make problems later. Merlin Olsen, their 36-year-old defensive tackle, tore a hamstring muscle and will be out indefinitely after hav-

to "only 334 yards, which is 20 over the league median per game, and 16 points, which was three under the wagering margin set by the Nevada oddsmakers. So Jet bettors "won."

Half the time the Jets played a threeman defensive front using four line-backers, not because New England upset Miami last Sunday with such a defense, but because of the lack of bodies. With Billy Newsome and Carl Barzilauskas out with injuries, Walt Michaels, the defensive coach, had only four linemen available and they were warm bodies indeed with the temperature 93 degrees.

Those four and five linebackers were alternated and they did all right, espe-cially Greg Buttle, the rookie from Penn State who may be the only star in the team's highlight film at the end of this long season.

After giving Denver 292 yards by passing, the Jets changed the second-ary, too, with Ed Taylor and Shafer Suggs the new cornerbacks, Phil Wise and Burgess Owens the safeties, and Roscoe Word released on waivers. Bob Griese, the Dolphin quarterback, com-pleted half of 24 attempts for a modest 123 yards but Griese was not passing

Also Howard Twilley and Nat Moore dropped difficult passes in the first half. "How often does that happen?" asked Shula. "Not often." The coach had driven his offense hard in practice and he will drive them hard again with the Los Angeles Rams due here next

Miami

Holtz doesn't have Miami's talent to push around but his coaching staff did call all the plays for Namath which was an innovation. The quarterback, whose performance rated a grade of B, was noncommital in his comments about that. "I do what the man says," Namath replied. The plays were brought into the huddle by either Don Buckey or David Knight, thhe alternating wide receivers. Bob Gresham started at running back rather than Ed Marinaro although Marinaro played the most. Steve Davis was the other starter and he fumbled three times, Lou Piccone losing the other one for four turnovers. Piccone's fumble came with 96 seconds left to play and the Jets at the Miami 47, which was close for them.

The closest they got was the Dolphin 32 and the question remains, with the 49ers the next opponent in San Francisco—do the lets have an offense? Overall the game was "encouraging," said Holtz. "But we've got a long way helped win some games) and a catcher whose intimate knowledge of the league's hitters and his own pitchers helps make him the league's, if not baseball's best all-round catcher. Rivers came to the Yankees from California last winter in the controversial trade involving Bobby Bonds and has been an even bigger asset than anyone could have imagined. Besides his speed, which has set the tone for the team's aggressive running game, Rivers has provided the team with its best average, a surprisingly high num-ber of runs batted in for a leadoff bat-ter and a defense that has virtually eliminated the extra-base hit in the gaps in right-center and left-center field.

Speaks With His Bat

Chambliss, as quiet off the field as Rivers is rancous, has had his best sea-son in runs batted in and providing the big blows for the Yankees earlier in the season when they were building their championship lead.

Then there are the others: Graig Nettles, who had a horrible first two months, but who has been as important with the bat as the others since then and who has been the best defensive third baseman in the league all year.

helped solidify the infield by giving the team its first legitimate second baseman since Bobby Richardson.

Fred Stanley, a totally overlooked shortstop who also has helped make the infield sound while hitting better than anyone could have expected Oscar Gamble, a part-time right fielder who has been as productive proportionately as any man on the body could pitch and win for these Yankees, but some have pitched and won better than others.

While Catfish Hunter has struggled through his worst season in six years, Ed Figueroa and Dock Ellis became the most constraintly effective structure. the most consistently effective starters on the team with Doyle Alexander providing a generally steady effectiveness that he had never shown in his pre-Yankee days. Sparky Lyle was a sensational relief pitcher until mid-August and Dick Tidrow and Grant Jackson have assumed the bulk of the relief responsi-bility with success since then.

In perusing the Yankee roster, another difference between this team and its championship precedessors becomes apparent. The people who used to win permants for the Yankees played together and stayed together for more than a month or two. These Yankees are the new Yankees in more ways than one because 12 of the 25 did not play for the team last season. Furthermore, two others played for the first time in 1975 and another five played for the Yankees for the first time in 1974. White and Munson are the only ones who were Yankees at the beginning of this decade.

It's as if George Steinbrenner and Gabe Paul and Billy Martin wanted to the Yankees of their recent past before they returned to Yankee Sta-dium where they could hoist a new permant on a new flag pole.

Pete Woods, the second-string quatterback who engineered Missouri's latest and most impressive of many upsets in recent seasons, said yester-day, "We're really an emotional team. Our talent is as good as anyone's but we're not as big as some. If we're not up to it emotionally, we're in trouble."

With such impressive victories Missouri might be expected to have a big winning record in five years and three games under Onofrio. But Missouri is as unpredictable as any team in the nation and has only a 30-30 won-lost mark under him.

Coach Is Puzzled

The coach said, "I wish we knew the answer. Beating Southern Califor-nia and then coming back so flat against Illinois—I just don't know. But this one over Ohio State is the biggest." Missouri had another of its letdowns between the Southern Cal and Ohio State games, losing in an upset to Illinois, eight days ago. Following the triumph over Alabama, Missouri won five and lost five in 1975. It was this week-to-week change that prompted Woods to speak of his team as "emotional." Missouri came back from a 21-7 defi-

Mrs. Young Wins Carlton Golf by 5 Shots at 282

Special to The New York Times CALABASES, Calif., Sept. 26-Donna Caponi Young has run away with the richest bonanza in womens' golf.
The 30-year-old blonde, twice United States Open champion, had a closing 72 for a total of 282 today and smothered the field in the $205,000 Carlton. She won by five strokes as Judy Rankin, the leading money-winner this year, and Jane Blalock finished at 287 to tie for second.

The Cariton, a new tournament, had a first prize of $35,000, plus a per-centage of the gate. The issue was hardly in doubt after the second round. Buoyed by "positive thinking." Mrs. Young led by four shots at the halfway mark, by five after the third round and at one stage today was seven under par while none of the 61 other golfers were below par.

For a long time Sandra Paimer was one under, but she lagged down the stretch. Miss Blalock, who had seemed hopelessly out of it with a first-day 77, had a final 69. Yesterday she had eached the land of the la gled the long 18th hole, today she birdied it.

It was tough going earry on, Mrs. Young admitted. On the first hole, her second shot found the rough in heavy grass. She pitched again into deep tangle, then chipped to six feet and got the putt in.

A pitch to six feet meant another par on the second hole, and a 5-iron gave her a putt of 15 feet that hpped out on the fourth.

"I was still nervous," Mrs. Young said. "I thought or 'golf power' and positive thinking. I squeezed my fingers together—and nothing worked."
Then however, a 10-foot putt rolled in for a birdle on the fifth hole and a

NAPA, Calif., Sept. 26 (AP)-J.C. Snead shot a final round of four-underpar 68 today and denied Johnny Miller a third consecutive victory in the Kaiser International open golf tournament. Snead, the 34-year-old naphew of Sam Snead, scored his second victory of the season and sixth of his career with a 274 total, 14 under par, on the 6,849-yard north course at the Silverado Country Club.

It is on that course, between the 10th and 11th holes, that Miller has built a home. He had won this event with relative ease the last two years.

He appeared about to do it again with a course-record 63 in the first round. But he could do no better than par 72 in the next two rounds and then flashed into the lead early in the final round with a string of three consecutive birdies beginning on the third hole. But on the sixth, a relatively easy par four, he bunkered his approach, blew it out to about 8-10 feet and then three-putted. It was a double bogey 6. He never really recovered, but did manage to salvage a share of second with a 69 and a 276, two shots back. Gilbert Ties Miller

Gibby Gilbert, who had led going into the final round, birdied his final hole for a 71 and a tie with Miller for sec-ond. Miller Barber was next at 277

Snead started the day one shot back of Gilbert with Miller another stroke behind. Miller's fast move beginning on the third sent him to the lead and his big gallery of friends and neighbors believed—he was about to win again. He held a one-stroke lead going to the sixth tee, had his game in gear and was playing his home course.

But he hit that bunker from the middle of the fairway, then three-putted. Snead, playing behind him, birdied the fifth almost simultaneously with Miller's double bogey.

It was a three-stroke swing, Snead had the lead and never let go.

from Detroit, Chicago, Cleveland, Penn-sylvania, Rhode Island, Delaware and the District of Columbia.

The Eastern package was bought by 10 people. From Atlanta, Boston and Washington.

By far the most elaborate package was put together by Regine, a French entertainer and owner of discotheques in Paris, Monte Carlo, Brazil and New York. She has dubbed it, Regine Goes to Ringside, and she has brought about 50 people from Paris along for the festivities at a cost of $300, exclusive of air fare, but including dinner and dancing at her New York club and a $200 ticket to the fight.

The Paris group, which did not charter a plane here, will get a buffet dinner before the fight, which includes such foods as duck. York ham with fresh tomatoes and cold consomme with sorrel and cucumbers, in Regine's private room. Buses will transport them to and from the fight, and afterward there will be champagne and dancing in the main room, and the promise of Ali, Norton and George Foreman, the former champion, in attendance. Many of the members of this group are part of the international jet set, a wealthy group of friends and trend setters who tend to spend their money rather conspicuously.

"They spend their money for less important reasons than this," said Peppo Vanini, the manager at Regine's. "This actually makes sense to me. Sometimes they go to Timbuktu, just because they're fond of the name. They are rich, you know."

However, some of the Parisians, who tive, are here for business purposes anyway, and see the fight as an ex-citing diversion. Maurice Benoma, who plans to open a men's boutique in New York next year, said, "I wouldn't have come just for the fight; I'm not crazy. [But] I had the perfect pretext for coming to New York now."

It is a big deal.

Mets' Box Score

By THOMAS ROGERS "Any team that is winning a lot of games needs some lucky breaks," said Manager Joe Frazier of the Mets. "We've been getting our share and we're grateful."

Frazier was especially grateful yesterday after a 2-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs, the team's 17th triumph in 23 games. With Jerry Koosman sacio 23 games. With Jerry Koosman regis-tering his 21st victory against nine de-feats, thanks to superb relief help from Bob Apodaca, the Mets-had several reasons to be pleased.

Koosman's Contrasts Their 84th triumph of the season was the second highest in their 15-year his-tory, and it drew them to within three games of the second-place Pittsburgh Pirates with seven games left on their schedule in the National League's Eastern Division.

"We've got a shot at second and we'll keep going," said Frazier. "The 84 victories doesn't mean much to me. We try to win every game. At the end of the season, we'll check out the figures and see how we did."

In a game 58 minutes late in starting and then delayed 43 minutes, by rain, Koosman was superb for six innings, and then he was totally ineffec-

Until the seventh, the left-hander allowed no hits. He also had nine strikeouts, raising his total to 189, a personal high for one season, "I had real good stuff and I was really thinking about a no-hitter," he said afterward.

'I Second-Guessed Myself'

But he threw a hard curveball to Mick Kelleher, the leadoff man in the seventh, and the Cub batter lined a single over shortstop into left field for the first hit. Still, Koosman's 2-0 lead

Apodaca, credited with his fifth save. gave up two hits in the eighth inning and one in the ninth, but was able to squirm out of trouble both times. Koosman Roots for Reliever

"I was in the dugout rooting for Boh," said Koosman, whose 21 vic-tories, four against Chicago, make him a strong candidate for the league's Cy Young Award. "I was thinking if there's ever a time I wanted him to do a super job, this is it."

The Mets could manage only two runs off Bill Borham, but they were enough to pin the right-hander with his 13th defeat in 21 decisions In the second inning, Bud Harrelson tripled to fight-center and scored when Leo Foster grounded out to Tallio And in the fifth, Bonham contributed two wild pitches as the Mets scored what proved to be the deciding run. Foster walked and took second as Bonham threw a pitch in the dirt. He went to third as Lee Mazzilli was grounding out and then scored when Bonium walked Millan on a pitch that bounced far to the left of the plate and cluded Steve Swisher, the Chicago

A clipping penalty on the following kickoff made the Giants start on their own 15, and a sack made them punt from the 19. This time they averted a Ram touchdown only because Larry McCutcheon fumbled at the goal line, and a roughing-the-kicker penalty saved them from yielding the ball near midfield. But on the next sequence Morton was sacked and then intercepted by Robertson, and Jim Bertelsen scored the final touchdown-from the 1. STATISTICS OF THE GAME a 16-yarder to Drew Pearson. The second was incomplete, but an interfer-ence call against Derrel Luce gave the Cowboys the ball on the Baltimore 32. The third pass, also to Pearson, was for 18 yards and got the ball to the 14 and set up Herrera's heroics.

Staubach, who was masterful all day despite a heavy second-half rain that made passing treacherous, rallied the Cowboys three times and put them ahead, 27-24, with 3:27 to play on a 38-yard scoring pass to Billy Joe Dupree. Staubach has hit 56 of 78 passes for 822 yards for the undefeated Cow-boys in the first three weeks of play. It was the first defeat for Baltimore.

Vikings 16, Lions 9

AT PONTIAC, Mich. — A I-yard touchdown pass from Greg Landry to Charlie Sanders with 2:05 left in the game brought Detroit to within one point of tying the game. But a faulty center snap was bobbled by Joe Reed, the holder, and Errol Mann could not get off the conversion kick. Mann got another chance to win it, but his 57-yard field-goal attempt with 3 seconds another chance to win it, but his 57-yard, field-goal attempt with 3 seconds left fell short. In a series before the Lions' touchdown they had tried four times to go in from the 1, but the Vikings' defensive wall of Carl Eler, Doug Sutherland, Alan Page and Jim Marshall stopped them. The game, before a sellout crowd of 80,638, was delayed almost a half hour and Minnesota was penalized for showing up late. They arrived 10 minutes before late. They arrived 10 minutes before game time after being caught in a traffic jam.

Beginning of Ford's Paid TV Spots

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY

The first of President Ford's paid political television advertising in the current campaign broke last night (just a one-minute spot on two networks), but it's just the beginning. There will be plenty of five-minute spots and 30-second commercials and all will have the same background song, "Feeling Good About America," written especially for the race by an advertising ally for the race by an advertising

The five-minute spots will begin run-ning today using the three networks. "Two are done and four more are ready to come out of the labs," said Malcolm D. MacDougall, creative director of Campaign '76, the house agency set up for the campaign. "I think we can hold people and make our point

"They may not be something you'd enter in the Cannes Film Festival, but he [the President] is sincere and gets the message across.

Those commercials, and the ones that are to come, have been fashioned from film footage shot cinema verite from film lookage shot children fashion by three crews who filmed the President during speeches, around the White House or during unstructured interviews. "You really get out of them what he thinks about things," said Mr.

The film crews are under the direction of producers with documentary experience and they are headed by Thomas Angell, formerly of the Public Broadcasting Service.

executive vice president and creative director of Humphrey Browning Mac-Dougall, Boston, admits that while he has the title creative director at Cam-paign '76 he's "not directing all the creative."

That's because the operation is really being run by Bailey & Deardourff, political advertising specialists in Washington And John Deardourff ("He feel there's print a library of the print feels there's quite a difference between product and political advertising.") is the real overseer of the creative out-

The two men know each other from a New Jersey political race that both worked on when Mr. MacDougall was

Humphrey Browning MacDougall was retained by Campaign '76 a couple of days before the Kansas City convention and it was then that the 40-pers convention of affacts page copy platform or plan of attack was written on the basis of "good

"The basic job is projecting President Ford as he really is," said Mr. MacDougall during an interview in New York last week, "People feel very good about him. America likes him a lot. People see him as a decent honest guy although they don't give him a lot of credit for what he's done. They don't think he's the cleverest man who ever think he's the cleverest man who ever went to the White House, but people will accept a lot of favorable things that we'll project."

The Boston ad executive sort of thought the political assignment might be part time but now finds "I'm work-ing more than full time."

Working with him as writers are Robert Gardner, formerly of J. Walter Thompson, San Francisco, who wrote the song, and Dennis Altman, on loan from Marschalk, one of the Interpublic Group of Companies. Jack Frost is art Campaign '76, which has offices in Washington and New York, maintains its own film editing facilities here. "The savings are enormous and the speed probably can't be matched by any regular agency. There's very little wheel spinning," commented Mr. Mac-

Dougall.

Most of the President's advertising will be in television, Mr. MacDougall said, estimating the figure at some 75 to 80 percent, but there will also be a lot of radio and toward the end of the campaign newspaper and farm journal advertising.

There is less money available for advertising than in previous Republi-can Presidential campaigns because of election reform laws. And notes Mr. MacDougall, "all peripheral campaigns have gone by the boards—nothing aimed at the old. It's the best thing that could happen, we concentrate on what we're doing and there's less wasted effort.

The Labor Scene

Changing Industrial Relations Pattern

By A. H. RASKIN

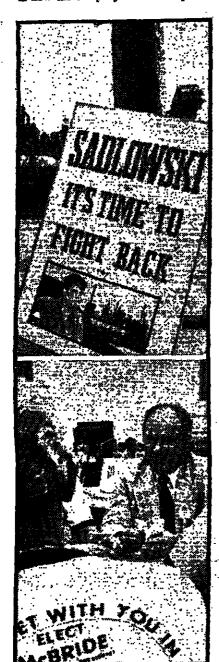

The administration slate in the bitter contest for control of the huge United Steelworkers of America does not intend to let its militant challenger, Ed Sadlowski, monopolize the progressive side of the battlefield.

One result of this determination is a virtual certainty that the union will go to the bargaining table in basic steel next year with a program calling for innovations that could reshape the entire pattern of industrial relations in the United States.

I. W. Abel, the union's retiring presi-dent, has already proclaimed its intention of pressing for lifetime job guaran-tees in the 1977 contract talks. Now Lloyd McBride, the St. Louis district director, who beads the five-man "unity ticket" carrying the establishment flag in next February's referendum, is spon-soring another substantial departure from the traditional balance on the labor-management front.

He wants to transform the grievance process, bedrock of in-plant relations, by extending into the steel mills the concept that "a person is innocent till proved guilty."

"That concept applies everywhere in our system of justice except the work-place," said Mr. McBride. "The way it is now the company can fire or punish

The battle for the leadership of the steelworkers heightened. Sadlowski forces have posted signs in Chicago. Lloyd McBride sought support at the recent union convention.

a worker, then we have to wait for redress till we've gone through the whole grievance machinery, right up to arbitration if necessary. We are determined to reverse that so that the worker stays on the job till the employer has proved his case. It makes sense to do it that way except perhaps where violence or some other special circumstance is involved." The proposal to turn the grievance The proposal to turn the greenteprocedure upside down and other reforms to be put forward by the McBride slate reflect the seriousness with which the union hierarchy views the Sadlowski presidential bid, even though

Mr. McBride insisted that the feedback he got from the field indicated that the rank and file was not "buying" the 38-year-old insurgent's attacks on the

Abel record. Mr. Sadlowski, who upset the administration two years ago by his resounding election victory for director of the big Chicago-Gary district, has built his campaign on charges that the leadership has developed too cozy a partnership with the steel industry.

He contends that the interests of the members are being sacrificed, specifically through the union's surrender of the right to strike next year as part of an experimental negotiating agreement aimed at insuring long-term iabor peace. Under the pact any disputes over new contract terms are to be resolved through binding arbitration.

Mr. McBride rejects his rival's assertion that the accord, under which steel wages have gone up twice as fast as the cost of living, proves that the union leaders "are in bed with the bosses."

"Every steel company that starts up an operation in the South resists us to the very end," the administration candidate said. "They fight us every way they know how. We know who the bastards are; it's the employers. But that doesn't mean we don't sit down with the devil at bargaining time and get the best deal we can. There is only one way you can have collective bargaining and that is with the employers."

Mr. Sadlowski, for his part, is just as vehement in rejecting administra-tion charges that his "hit-the-bricks" philosophy is a prescription for per-petual strikes.

"That is the furthest thing from the truth," he declared. "My argument is that you should not strip the muscle out of a man's arm. If the boss knows you won't strike, you have no leverage. The threat of a strike is what makes the boss move. The test of leadership is to know how to use that threat effectively."

Thus far the young rebel from South Chicago is ranning a one-man campaign but he expects to announce within a week or two a full five-member slate. He says it will cover the spectrum of the 1.4 million-member union, with representation from the union's staff as well as the rank and file. Asked whether any other district director will move away from what Mr. director will move away from what Mr.
Abel often calls "the official family"
to join his ticket, the maverick Mr.
Sadlowski responded, "Til hang loose

The contest would merit nationwide attention solely on the basis of the lion members in aluminum, copper, zinc, lead, fabricating plants and can manu-facturing as well as basic steel. But an extra dimension of interest has been extra dimension of interest has been added by the extent to which the race is viewed as a barometer of worker sentiment in a power push by young rebels bent on stopping the "collaborationist" trend in steel and other industries and returning labor to the confrontationist tactics of the early New Deal years. Deal years.

Many other key unions are in process of leadership change but in most cases the newcomers to authority are dedicated to continuation of the same fundamental policies as their predecessors. Mr. Sadlowski is one of the few committed to sweeping change. He de-clares himself "sick and tired" of the direction laid down by Mr. Abel, whom he accuses of forgetting that he worked for the workers, not they for him. The pro-McBride elements see the issue in quite opposite terms. "What Sadlowski and the outside unionwreckers who support him are trying to do is go from the constructive poli-cies of I. W. Abel back to those of the I. W. W., the old Wobbles, who wanted to blow up everything," is the way one administration stalwart sums it up.

What concerns many industrialists is that, no matter who wins the February election, the no-strike provision of the experimental negotiating agreement may become a casualty of the next contract round. While Mr. McBride in no way shares his foe's low regard for the peace pact, he stresses that it remains an experiment, with final judgment dependent on whether it proves as beneficial in 1977 as he feels it did

"If it meets the test in 1977, it is quite likely that it will be renewed," Mr. McBride said. "If it does not, it is positive that it will not be renewed."

The yardstick will be whether the union and industry bargainers in steel can once again agree on all issues without having to invoke arbitration. "If we wind up having to go to arbitration on basic issues, it would blow the idea all to hell," he declared.

That could prove an epitaph in a ser when the union is talking of raising such prickly issues as lifetime employment security, an upheaval in the grievance machinery and an exten-sion of whatever breakthrough the Ford strikers make in their current battle to shorten work time.

Last of the Exchange Funds

By ROBERT MEIZ

Exchange funds are like weeds. Congress chops them down, turns its back, and they come again.

Taxpayers who are aware of these investment vehicles — they permit a tax-free exchange of one or two holdings for shares in a balanced portfolio of stocks—are either mildly provoked as concerned citizens or overjoyed as investors.

The prospect for an exchange typically owns say, 1,000 shares of Excon Corporation stock purchased many years ago at a fraction of today's price. Were he to sell his shares, the investor would be subject to a capital gains tax of 25 percent or more of the gain. Such gains frequently represent 90 per-cent or more of the proceeds.

The exchange funds are back again -but the latest green shoots may be the last of the species. In 1966, Con-gress ruled out such funds organized as corporations. But earlier this year the Vance Sanders Exchange Fund came to market as a California Limited Partnership and succeeded in bypassing Congress with a $140-million exchange.

The omnibus tax bill, which President Ford is expected to sign within days, rules out the limited-partnership form of exchange fund, but allows six such funds along fund approach to the proceeding the process of the partnership to the partnersh funds already in registration to proceed. Those six funds can be expected to leave brokers' shelves quickly. One of them, the Fidelity Exchange Fund of Boston, reportedly has received indications of interest amounting to more than $400 million. However, that fund, like the other five, is limited to a $100 million exchange.

The magnificent Mercedes-Benz 450SEL: It's a world unto itself.

With its price of more than $22,000, it's reasonable to expect that everyone driver and each and every passenger - should enjoy every moment spent in the Mercedes-Benz 450SEL. Everyone does.

Because within its artfully sculpted contours, the 450SEL conceals an extraordinary array of creature comforts. Yet here is one car that appeals as strongly to the intellect as it does to the senses. Read on. Some surprises may be in order.

The Mercedes-Benz 450SEL is the contemporary version of the classic touring car. The automotive embodiment of elegance.

To be sure, it is a driver's automobile, replete with dozens of stunning engineering developments Most of them are unique to the 450SEL.

But the 450SEL is also a passenger's automobile, in which a host of biotechnological ideas have been beautifully ated into human terms. The result is pleasure...pure pleasure, whether you take the wheel or simply enjoy the ride.

Appeals to the senses

You enter the Mercedes Benz 450SEL through doors, front or rear, that open a full 36 inches wide. Close the doorsand you're wrapped in a sure, secure and satisfyingly luxurious environment. You savor satiny, premium leather-or, if it's more to your taste, rich velour. You settle into wide, anatomically correct seats, firmly sprung, whose individual suspension is actually tuned to the car's own suspension. You notice that all interior surfaces are padded and finished for safety as well as sumptuousness.

You defy the elements with a climate control system designed to automatically maintain the precise temperature you prefer at any setting between 65° to 85°. The system also defogs, defrosts, and dehumidifies. Eleven strategically placed and adjustable vents-and front doors that actually "breathe"—assure proper ventilation in every area of the car.

You observe the world outside through an expanse of tinted glass. If you are a passenger, unobtrusively sited rear reading lamps let you read or work at night without interfering with the driver's vision. Adjustable stereo speak ers bathe you in sound at the touch of a switch. You cruise even the roughest roads with confidence, the result of the 450SEL's synergistic combination of independent suspension, 116.7-inch wheelbase and welded-not bolted-monocoque construction.

As you ride, you appreciate why 450SELs must be assembled at so slow a rate. Time is lavished on hundreds of individual hand operations. Human touches, loving attention to detail that makes the 450SEL an automobile few -if any-automobiles in the world can even hope to match.

Appeals to the intellect

The 450SEL comes to you with a complement of safety, performance and comfort features—as standard equipment -that is almost unheard of these days. Your Dealer can give you the details.

The 450SEL is a sensibly complete car. It's fully equipped right from the start, and priced to reflect its essential honesty. What few items of optional equipment you might consider adding have more to do with your own sense of aesthetics, rather than engineering. Even so, the list is startlingly short. It includes such ultra-refined touches as an electric sunroof, heated seats, lightalloy wheels or rear-sear headrests.

Mercedes-Benz has ach paralleled record in this v on the average official a over the past five years al Benz holds its value be other make of luxury America. Any other mak

The Mercedes-Benz 450SFL is virtually a limited-edition automobile. Only 5,423 will be imported in all of: 1976, and only 17,418 have been available in America since its introduction.

There is another advantage to the 450SEL that deserves your thought. Retained value.

For the automobile industry, retained value is the ultimate test of quality. As you'd expect, year after year,

And the outlook for next year is for an even bigger planting, on the order of 12.5 million to 13 million acres.

The reason, of course, is price. Upland cotton, the industry standard, is currently selling for nearly 77 cents a pound, compared to a season average of 50 cents a pound for 1975.

So dramatic and sustained has been the price increase that there is some fear that it will have a long-term negative effect; with cotton selling in the 70-cent range and polyester in the 50-cent range, as is the case at present, there is strong pressure on manufac-turers to continue the switch to manmade fiber, just as the cotton industry is beginning to stop and possibly even reverse that trend.

One possibility, according to a well-placed source in the cotton industry, is pressure from the cotton producers to ease restrictions on imports of cot-ton, maintaining price stability and slowing a possible stampede to poly-

Cotton demand is up worldwide, but even more important is that cotton on hand—the expected harvest plus what was carried over from previous years -is very close to the expected total need, and may fall short. The carryover from last year was a very skimpy 3.7 million bales (six to seven million is considered more nearly normal). This is a far cry from 10 years ago, when falling demand and a record crop produced an accumulated carryover of nearly 17 million bales—well over the crop that year-with a resulting price crash to 22-cents a pound. . Since then, prices have been steadily up and this year soared well over expectations.

The story of the cotton renaissance, moreover, is more than simply eco-nomic and agricultural—it is almost a primer of the New South—a tradition-steeped region that is meeting the in-dustrial North on its own battleground with new techniques and new sophistication and if not precisely winning, at least beginning to hold its own.

"The cotton industry has suffered from a lack of funding to confront man-made fibers in the battle for the market," said Gaylon Booker, director of market research for the Cotton Council. "Now, we're strongly com-mitted to the principal that we must have a strong program of research and promotion."

For decades, as man-made fibers cut inexorably into cotton's share of the fiber market, growers did little more than to stand by and watch.

"Oh, we made passes at promotion ever since the late 40's," said Dabney Welford of the Cotton Council's research department. "But never in a big way. Now that has changed."

Share Slipped to 85 percent

By 1971, the Cotton Council, with headquarters in Memphis, created an organization called Cotton Incorporated. Its headquarters were placed in New York City and a research and de-velopment facility built in North Caro-

The reasons were compelling. In 1920, when man-made fibers, rayon and acetate, first began to appear as a commercial reality, they commanded a negligible three-tenths of one percent of the market at the mills. Cotton held 88 percent. Wool, was about 10 percent, and small amounts of imported flax and silk accounted for the rest.

By 1930, cotton's share had slipped

Tighter Antipollution Standards

In each case, the lobbying was done by employees of corporations that would have been affected adversely by new laws. The incidents were evidence that American businesses are increasingly dis-

The advent of tighter air pollution standards has also produced an increase n corporate lobbying.

One of the most extensive lobbying campaigns by employees occurred three years ago, when employees of Pan American World Airways round the world raised many tens of thousands of dollars to finance a campaign against what the airline claimed was discriminatory treatnent toward it. # Brazil Is Hopeful Oil Discovery In Iraq Will Turn Into Bonanza

By JUAN DE ONIS

RIO DE JANEIRO - With Brazil's economic development and consump-tion of oil rapidly increasing, a search has been under way to find major new petroleum sources. Now, Government officials believe they have found their bonanza—6,000 miles away in Iraq.

The discovery at Majnoon, north of Basra, by Braspetro, the explora-tion division of Brazil's state oil com-pany, is so large that it could provide half of Brazil's imports by 1980, and the Iraqi oil would be about $3 below world market price, oil officials under a risk contract for oil exploration signed with Iraq's national oil state oil company, Petrobras is entitled to 20 percent of the oil discovered at Majnoon, and has an option to buy the rest at international prices.

General Araken de Oliveira, president of Petrobras, said the well tests at Majnoon indicated a minimum production of 300,000 barrels a day, which could rise to 600,000 barrels daily with further drilling.

Brazil's current national production is 175,000 barrels a day while imports are currently 700,000 barrels daily, at a cost of $3.2 billion. Consumption is expected to rise to 1.2 million barrels by 1980, with imports of 800,000 barreis a day.

Oil-Import Burden The burden of oil imports for Brazil's industrialized economy is so heavy that it now takes all of this country's coffee and soybean exports to pay for oil

This has forced Petrobras to under take oil-exploration ventures not only in Brazil, where results have been meager over the last 20 years, but also in oil countries abroad under risk con-tracts. By these terms, Brazil runs the risk of losing capital if no oil is found, but puts its money where the oil prospects are better than at home. The Iraqi venture has cost Brazil $30 million, according to General de Oliveira. With the discovery of oil, the exploration costs will be paid by Iraq, and development costs for the field will be shared according to the production taken by each country.

Petrobras has also entered into risk contracts for exploration in Libva and Algeria, and is studying a venture in

Like so many drama critics, money market analysis over the weekend sought to recapture the excitement of the big increase in money. "A veritable moon shot," said Paine Webber, Jackson & Curtis. For all the astonishment over the increase in the money supply, it has in-creased the average volume of checking account balances plus currency to $308.8 billion, or only $1.5 billion above its $307.3 billion level in mid-Angust. Even with its record increase disclosed last week, the basic money supply was still growing within limits sought by the Federal Reserve. As a result, most money market analysis do not believe the Federal Reserve will tighten monetary conditions to slow down money growth, which is expected to flatten out in the weeks ahead anyway. "There is no reason," Lawrence A. Kud-low of Paine Webber said, "to expect

Dr. Joseph Zimmerman, vice president of the Miles Metal Corporation and an 85-year-old veteran of the cop-per business, puts the matter this way: "Thus far there is no evidence of any great acceleration in the wheels of commerce and industry. Copper consumers seem to be just as hesitant to rush in and buy as they were a few months ago simply because there has been no great improvement in demand for fabricated products."

Wire mills operate at 75 per cent of capacity and brass mills at a lower rate, and recently the Commodity Research Bureau, the industry's research organization, noted that some brass and bronze ingot makers recently cut prices only a month after raising them.

At the production end, many producers operate at below capacity. Copper stocks recently reached record levels, with the London Metal Exchange and the Commodity Exchange

The most extensive employee lobbying effort recently was one admittedly sponsored by the Rockwell International Corion to keep the B-1 bomber project

In company newspapers, in leaflets is-sued to employees and posted on office and factory bulletin boards, and in-plant public address system announcements, Rockwell's 119,000 employees were urged by company executives to write to Conmendous marketing push by the polyester giants. Du Pont, Celanese and Eastman. Du Pont in particular persuaded mills to use their blend ratio. of 65 percent polyester and 35 cotton, backed by a massive consumer advertising program that benefited the mills—so long as they used that blend.

"It was," said Mr. Booker, the cotton marketing research director, "a tramendous asset for the manufacturer of the shirt or the sheet.

"Up to the mid-60's, poly was selling for a dollar-plus a pound and cotton was in the 20-odd cent range, and cotton was still losing to polyester, and we were losing on a functional property—primarily ease of care and durability."

Meanwhile, the cotton interests continued to promote 100 percent cotton and the housewives didn't buy it.

"We decided," said Mr. Booker, "that we had very little chance to alter the blend level against the tremendous expenditures they were spending to advecate 65-35 or 50-50 blends."

It was later that the Cotton Council decided to begin fighting the polyester interests on their own terms. Each participaling grower agreed to a "check-off" on production of $1 a bale. The money was to be used for new product research and promotion by a new or-ganization, Cotton Incorporated.

ganization, Cotton Incorporated.

By June of 1974, Cotton Incorporated, funded by about $12 million from the growers, had created what is called Natural Blend — 60 percent cotton 40 percent man made fiber. To go with it, there was even a "cotton mark" similar in concept to the Wool Mark used successfully by the woolen industry to heighten the image of their products.

The cotton industry had begun to

The cotton industry had begun to capitalize on something it had known for some years, and which its field market research was confirming overwhelmingly—men prefer cotton shirts, but women prefer easy-care shirts. And women buy almost all the shirts. Natu-ral Blend satisfied both.

ral Blend satisfied both.

In 1971, cotton had 37:4 percent of the mill fiber market; in 1972, it had fallen again to 34 percent, and by 1973 to 30 percent. But in 1974, the decline stopped, and even increased a few tenths of a percent. In 1975, it fell again, but only slightly to just over 29 percent. And now it appears to be holding there, perhaps increasing slightly. ing there, perhaps increasing slightly. At the same time, six major manu-

New Approaches Tried But there are new approaches as well. Cotton Incorporated is pursuing research on new products. The New York City Fire Department last year adopted fire resistant cotton uniforms, made of Fire Stop, a Cotton Incorporated innovation,

There is extensive research underway on developing cotton strains that insects do not like, on new methods of increasing yields, and, of developing new uses not only for cotton fiber, but for the byproducts, cottonseed and

Already there have been unsuccessful attempts to commercially produce a high protein flour milled from cottonseed, a process that involves removal of seed components that are harmful if ingested. The success of the new approaches is not yet fully known but it is clear that cotton has managed to turn a rout into a standoff.

And last week the Cotton Council began a program of approaching its member growers with a proposal to increase their contribution to the work of Cotton Incorporated. It is hoped that the agency can double its budget.

Of BankAmericard Collections

The Chase Manhattan Bank has entered nto an agreement with Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz's office to modify its collection practices covering delinquent BankAmericard card holders and card holders of department stores whose credit cards are operated by Chase.

Under the agreement, Chase, in its forts to collect, will contact by phone a neighbor or landlord of a delinquent debtor only in limited instances where mail has been returned with no forwarding address and then only for the sole purpose of attempting to obtain a forwarding address.

Inquiry has shown, the Attorney Gen-eral said, that Chase's collection person-nel when unable to contact a delinquent debtor by phone would call a neighbor or landlord to request that a message be given to the cardholder that he return the given to the cardholder that he return the call. This practice, the Attorney General's office said, without prior consent, amounts to an unwarranted invasion of the card holder's right of privacy. Chase has agreed to discontinue the practice without any admission it had violated the law.

in New York reporting warehouse stocks totaling 780,000 short tons. These are major centers for world copper trading either through spot purchases or through futures.

Morton L. Schultz, a first vice president of Bache, Halsey Stuart Inc., reports that bargain hunters are buying copper through dealers at a substantial discount under producers' prices. "I don't see much improvement in de-mand and prices in the rest of this quarter, but I do expect a modest improvement in the fourth quarter," he said, adding that much would depend on the length of the auto strike. Mr. Schultz is assistant manager of the Bache metal department, a large dealer

Coffee Drinking Off

Coffee consumption in this country keeps moving down. The factory worker who drank 4.54 cups a day in 1962, and 2.91 cups in 1975 is drinking 2.76 cups daily this year. High prices are one deterrent.

Yet Brazil, the world's largest coffee producer, keeps buying coffee from other nations in a coals-to-Newcastle operation to keep prices up. All this makes the coffee price situation worth watching watching.

In recent months Brazil, whose harrecent months Brazil, whose harvest was down quite sharply this year, has bought coffee from the Ivory Coast and some other mainland African nations as well as the island Malagasy Republic (also known as Madagascar).

The imported coffee is used by Brazil for its freeze-dried and instant varieties, allowing the Brazilians to export more of their own green or un-roasted coffee. Their buying also holds the price high.

Commodity experts, while noting that some buyers still bid frantically for coffee at today's high prices of more than $1.50 a pound unroasted, wonder how long it will last. "Sooner or later consumption declines have to be re-flected in lower prices," one said.

Smaller Hershey Bars?

Will Hershey Foods, the big chocolate maker, cut the size of its bars or raise the unit price? Commodity ex-perts are as interested in finding an answer to that question as most chocolate munchers will be. Hershey will say only that the matter is under consideration.

Cocoa prices have been soaring this year, and recently they reached a record high of more than $1.16 a pound in terms of the December de-livery on the New York Cocoa Exchange. The immediate reason was a spate of reports from Ghana, the world's largest producer, that its crop is not so good as hoped. Other African nations also indicate small crops. Since cocoa is the major ingredient in chocolate and Hershey is one of the nation's largest chocolate makers, the price of one influences the actions of the other. Cocoa beans are ground, mixed with sugar and flavorings and the result is chocolate. The only bright spot in the mix is sugar, which has been lower priced all year, and this could been low-priced all year, and this could help keep a size cut or price rise smaller than otherwise.

The Commodity Research Bureau's index of futures prices (1976=100) closed at 202.0 last Friday. It stood at 203.9 the week before.

Dividend Meetings

Capital Spending in 2d Quarter Cut by Investor-Owned Utilities

Spending on new plant and equipment by the nation's investor-owned utilities dropped to $12.3 billion in the second quarter from the record $16.1 billion set in the like three months of 1975, the Conference Board, an independent business monitoring group, reported yesterday.

However, the board noted that the out-lays in the second quarter, of which 95 percent were by electric utilities, were up 84 percent from the first three months of 1976. New capital spending by the electric utilities in the second quarter totaled $11.7 billion.

Citizens' Group Suggests Savings For New York on Welfare Costs

A citizens' group estimated yesterday that New York City would save $22.6 million a year — $10.1 million in local taxes, the rest in state and Federal sharing—if it stopped exceeding state stand-ards for special welfare grants and group

But the Citizens Budget Commission said these two programs were the only significant items in the city's billiondollar social-service costs that the city itself controls completely. So greater sav-ings would require either greater Federal sharing or state revisions to fit "fiscal

The other elements, the commission said, are imposed by the state in a half dozen major programs that cost $4.03 billion a year here, including the city share of $1.08 billion.

The group, which is an association of business and real estate interests, did say that the city does have responsibility for coping, within the state standards, with problems of ineligibility, other abuses and frauds and administrative errors.

tion, it went on, has now become stricter One new decision has been to stop reimbursing welfare recipients for rent security deposits, in aiming to save $15 million—$4.5 million of this in city taxes.

In day care, the commission said, the city has allowed more moderateincome families to take part than upstate standards, and has paid higher reimburse-ment than the state will allow.

The report noted the city had cut day-care programs $34 million to fit into a $116.2 million budget for the year started last July I, closing some underutilized centers and developing reimbursement rates based on attendance rather than expenses. The special welfare grants are for such items as moving, day care and replacement of lost or stolen checks. The city, the commission said, has "exceeded the state mandate," and has been in particular "fairly lenient in granting moving expenses."

The city Human Resources Administration it want on has now become stricter.

Mail Survey of Eligibility Meanwhile, the city and state Departments of Social Services have started a third joint mail survey of eligibility of the city's current 320,775 welfare cases, threatening to close any that fail to reply by Friday.

They announced that last year's survey had referred 11,022 cases for closing, of which 5,637 then re-established need but 5,385 remained closed at a potential annual saving of $25 million in cash grants and Medicaid.

In a related issue, the Citizens Com mittee for Children of New York reported Screening Diagnosis and Treatment—had falled to provide preventive and on-going

This, he said, would an inmate who assaulted a guard at a Rikers Island prison earlier this year.

The Correction Officers Benevolent Association criticized State Supreme Court our people are in great jeopardy," Mr. Justice Max Bloom for sentencing Elliot Cranston said.

to inmates' original jail terms, rather than provide the additional deterrent of extra time in prison. "Until it is done that way, Justice Max Bloom for sentencing Elliot Baker to up to four years in prison for an assault on Correction Officer William Dominguez last July 18. The sentence was to run concurrently with an 8 1-3-to 25-year sentence Mr. Baker received for manslaughter.

"Our officers are being assaulted, and there is no deterrent from it," said Donald J. Cranston, first vice president of the benevolent association, "If we don't have the power of the criminal justice system behind us, I don't know how we can continue."

Cranston said.

Mr. Cranston acknowledged that he did not expect any substantive action to result from his organization's request to the Appellate Division and the Judicial Conference for review of Justice Bloom's sentence. But he said it was "important to bring this situation to the attention of the public and the judicial system."

Justice Bloom said yesterday that because of quirks in the state's sentencing laws, any action he could have taken in the Baker case would have had "substantially" the same result.
